Hull Warns Mexicans to Pay for Land They Seized

Bluntly Worded Note to Ambassador Shocks Southern Capital.

Expropriations Go Back as Far as '15

U. S. Accuses Neighbor of 'Evasion' of Payment for Properties.

(Text on Page 9.)

By William V. Nessly.

Secretary of State Hull moved in determined fashion yesterday to require a settlement by Mexico for "several hundred" seizures of American-owned agrarian property by the Mexican government in the past 23 years.

He summoned to the State Department Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, the Mexican Ambassador, and handed him a plainly worded note accusing Mexico of evading repeated requests for action, and calling for international arbitration of the dispute.

The note invoked the inter-American treaty of arbitration, signed here on January 5, 1929, to which the 21 American republics have subscribed. It called for submission to arbitration of the question "whether there has been compliance by the Government of Mexico with the rule for compensation as prescribed by international law in the case of the American citizens whose farm and agrarian properties in Mexico have been expropriated by the Mexican Government since August 30, 1927, and if not, the amount of, and terms under which, compensation should be made by the Government of Mexico."

Note Shocks Mexico City.

The ambassador, appearing considerably perturbed as he emerged from an hour's conference with the Secretary, refused to comment.

The note came as a shock in Mexico City, where the view was expressed that it would be felt more sharply than was the suspension on March 27 of United States purchases of Mexican silver, the United Press reported from Mexico City.

Hull's action was noteworthy in another respect, that it was taken wholly in the interests of Americans of small means who invested all or practically all of their resources in Mexico and found their livelihood cut off when the property was taken from them without compensation.

While the Secretary's note made no mention of the recent expropriation by Mexico of immensely valuable American and British oil properties, previous expressions by him made it clear that all of the acts of expropriation were considered to be in the same classification, and indicated that principles raised in the case of the farm-land seizures will be held to apply as

Barbara Arranges A Private Parting; She'll Keep Son, 2

By the Associated Press.

London, July 21.—Attorneys for Count and Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow were understood today to be planning a private separation under which the countess, the former Barbara Hutton, would receive custody of their 2-year-old Lance and the count would have permission to see the boy at intervals, and to keep in touch with his education.

Legion Commander Is Hissed For Slap at 'Red Professors'

Doherty Blames Public's Apathy for 'Radicals' in Columbia Talk.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 21.—Daniel J. Doherty, national commander of the American Legion, was hissed tonight when he spoke of "red professors" in a speech before a joint conference on education at Columbia University's Teachers College.

Dean William F. Russell, of the college, denounced the demonstrators, saying:

"To those who had the discourtesy to hiss I express my contempt."

Doherty frequently departed from his prepared speech indirectly answering Prof. William Gellerman, of Northwestern University, whose recent thesis by Columbia Teachers College denounced legion leaders as "reactionary" and as giving the rank and file little voice in legion policies.

The outbreak of hissing occurred as, speaking of public apathy over certain "domestic problems," he added that but for apathy "we would not have what is known as red professors."

As the noise subsided he went on: "If it were not for the freedom and democracy in this country I would not have the freedom to say these things and you would not have the right to hiss."

DANIEL J. DOHERTY.

To that expression, there was applause.

While Doherty did not mention Gellerman by name, Dean Russell did.

The Gellerman thesis, he said in introducing the Legionnaire, was published at Columbia because "in a free university in a free country students and faculty alike must be free to study . . . to draw inferences and conclusions, and free to speak and publish, even when their ideas differ from our own."

In his prepared text, Doherty had said attacks on the Legion usually were made for private motives.

Business Tax On Interstate Trade Voided

Justice Bailey Rules Local Levy Inapplicable to Grocery Chain.

By James D. Secrest.

Washington's stop-gap business-privilege tax was given such a severe judicial jolt yesterday in United States District Court that it left District officials guessing somewhat as to its effect, and admitting it probably foreshadows abandonment of the levy after this fiscal year.

Justice Jennings Bailey, ruling on a demurrer in a suit of the District Grocery Stores, Inc., held that the business tax could not be applied to interstate commerce as practiced by the District Grocery Stores.

In arriving at this opinion, Justice Bailey deduced that Congress, when legislating for the District, is limited in its powers to the constitutional authorities accorded the States. This would appear to mean that it is little more than a legislature when passing on local legislation.

Appeal Indicated.

With District officials indicating they will contest Justice Bailey's decision, either by appeal or a change of plea relative to interstate commerce, the court ruling is likely to have little or no immediate practical effect on municipal tax collections.

Should the ruling be sustained, however, the District is in danger of losing an unpredictable amount of revenue and Washington businessmen are threatened with a mercantile disadvantage in competition with outside concerns selling goods in the District.

As the court held that the District clearly has the right to enforce the tax on business done solely within the Capital, the average local businessman will be unaffected by the ultimate decision on interstate commerce.

Accurate estimates of the proportion of hitherto taxed business that may be classed as interstate were not obtainable, but one official "guessed" it might run as high as 20 or 25 per cent.

This will not mean, however, that

U.S. May Add To Industrial, Income Taxes

Deficit Forces Treasury to Consider High Rate, Low Exemption.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury, faced with the prospect that its ninth successive deficit will amount to some $4,000,000,000 this fiscal year, is studying the possibility of levying more taxes on wealthy corporations and little fellows.

This was disclosed yesterday by Roswell Magill, acting Secretary of the Treasury. Although no policy decisions will be made until Secretary Morgenthau and President Roosevelt return from vacations, Magill said his experts were investigating the question of reducing personal exemptions and increasing tax rates on moderate incomes.

As for the big corporations, the President personally has ordered aides to draw up a program for strengthening the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes.

Magill, foremost tax expert in the Government, declined to give his opinion about the wisdom of reducing exemptions or to indicate how much of a change was being studied. He pointed out, however, that Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, has attempted unsuccessfully for several years to get Congress to cut the exemption for single persons from $1,000 to $800 and for heads of families from $2,500 to $2,000. He also declined to discuss proposals of both La Follette and Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, to increase the tax rates on incomes up to $100,000 per year.

The Justice Department has drawn up an official opinion predicting the Supreme Court would hold constitutional a law, recommended by Mr. Roosevelt, to tax the future salaries of State and local governmental employes and the income from future issues of State securities. Magill said the Treasury was preparing a bill, for the next Congress, to remove present exemptions.

Meanwhile, Magill said, no decision has been made as to how far the Treasury would go in taxing salaries for back years of employes of quasi-governmental agencies

Two Tuberculosis Sufferers Jailed Under Sanitary Code

Two tubercular patients were convicted in Police Court yesterday of violating the District sanitary code in a case pressed by Health Department officials.

Aiming to end the practice of tubercular patients leaving Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale without authorization of physicians and before they are cured, the officials brought charges against Harold Benton, 41, of 430 Third street northwest and William Lucas, 20, colored, of 1311 Third street southwest.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, explained that the department has had considerable trouble with patients who refuse to obey doctors' orders and go about spreading their disease.

Judge Edward M. Curran convicted Lucas on five counts and sentenced him to a total of 360 days imprisonment with hospital treatment recommended. Benton was given a similar sentence.

Mrs. Margaret Heiny, of the Health Department nursing service, who took the case to court, gave the following records on the defendants:

Lucas went to Glenn Dale March 19, this year, and left the following day against a doctor's advice. He went to Gallinger May 7 and left a few hours later; he returned May 13 and departed on May 16.

Benton was sent to Gallinger for 30 days in February, this year, after the department had been trying to get him into a hospital for several months. He asked to be transferred to the Veterans' Mount Alto Hospital, but he failed to reach the latter.

Mrs. Heiny said that Benton's wife contracted tuberculosis between January and July, this year, presumably from her husband.

South's WPA Quota Lifted By 200,000

Hopkins Declares Any Charge of Political Motive 'Cynical.'

Move Is Third in Recent Weeks Designed to Benefit Dixie.

By Robert C. Albright.

Works Progress Administrator Hopkins yesterday ordered and immediate increase of 200,000 in Southern WPA rolls, but said one has got to be "awful cynical" to attribute the increase to politics.

It was the third WPA move in the South since the President called it "the Nation's No. 1 economic problem." Instructions went out to 11 Southern WPA State administrators to raise their job quotas at once.

Speaking freely of "politics in relief" charges, the Works Progress administrator said it is inevitable that WPA workers talk politics "when they go out to lunch," but no one can "deliver" their vote.

Asked flatly what proportion of WPA workers he thought would "vote for Roosevelt without being told," Hopkins replied:

Harvest Provided For.

"At least 90 per cent. Why not? It is so obvious. Go out and talk to a thousand poor people and you will get their answer right on the land."

Hopkins refused to be drawn into a "third term for Roosevelt" discussion, and said his answer did not refer to that.

Hopkins said he plans to increase the WPA relief load in the South during periods of from two to six months a year to supplement inadequate incomes with work in the rural sections.

The job step-ups will be made "where crops have been laid by and the harvest has not yet begun," Hopkins said. When the crop-gathering season arrives, workers will be released until the harvest is completed and then reassigned.

Studies Missouri Charge.

Hopkins disclaimed all knowledge of Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee investigations of WPA political activity in Kentucky, Tennessee and Pennsylvania, but said he had sent WPA Field Investigator Bruce Uthus to Missouri to look into charges made by Gov. Floyd C. Stark.

Stark, a Roosevelt supporter, but a non-New Dealer, and the Tom Pendergast machine, of Kansas City, have entered opposing candidates for the State Supreme Court, and the sharp judicial contest has developed into a grim struggle for ultimate control of the State.

Stark sent Hopkins a dozen letters from persons complaining local PWA officials were using their influence for the Pendergast candidate.

Hopkins yesterday called into conference Missouri WPA State Administrator Matthew Murray, who said, in his judgment, the

Sabotage Balking West Fire Fighters As Blazes Spread

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 21.—Fire, sabotage and death-dealing heat wrought havoc and tragedy in the Pacific Northwest today.

Scores of fires raged across the region, which in some spots was almost bone dry.

Record-breaking heat caused three deaths. Wind blew the flames out of control in some places and tired fighters said they would be lucky if they made headway against the flames.

British Columbia officials reported they found 1,000 feet of fire hose slit with knives, near the Vancouver Island conflagration. They also said sugar had been poured into gasoline to disable fire-fighting pumps.

Incendiarism previously had been reported by Washington State authorities. They said men had been seen setting fires, and some of them apparently were motivated by the desire to get jobs fighting the flames.

The heat deaths occurred in Oregon, where temperatures passed the 100-mark.

Czech Peace Near as Paris Fetes George

Bonnet Sees Halifax, Calls Plans 'Favorable' to Prague.

50,000 French Soldiers Show Monarch New War Machines.

By the United Press.

Paris, July 21.—Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet tonight predicted an imminent solution of the Czechoslovak crisis as a result of daylong Anglo-French diplomatic discussions at Versailles against the ominous backdrop of France's greatest post-war military show, staged in honor of visiting King George VI.

Bonnet, who made his announcement after returning from Versailles, birthplace of the now-tattered World War Peace Treaty, said "things moved favorably for Czechoslovakia today and the situation is most bright."

Hurrying back to Paris from his talk with British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, Bonnet went into conference with the Czechoslovak Ambassador, Dr. Stefan Osusky.

Surrender Rumored.

The anticipated move to dispel the war clouds that have hovered over central Europe for nearly three months because of the autonomy demands of the German Sudeten minority in Czechoslovakia was attributed to an Anglo-French decision to exert new pressure on the Prague government.

President Benes of Czechoslovakia will be urged by Britain and France to discontinue resistance to the Sudeten minority program advanced by Konrad Henlein, the "Czechoslovak Hitler," unofficial reports said.

"At the conclusion of yesterday's conversations with Lord Halifax which continued without interruption throughout today at Versailles we have a renewed comforting feeling of complete harmony," Bonnet said.

"I saw Ambassador Osusky today and his report from Prague was most reassuring.

Lebrun to Visit London.

"The British sovereigns have been pleased by the demonstrations of profound French popular sentiment and insist upon publication, before their departure from Paris, of an invitation to President Lebrun to return the state visit to London."

An official announcement said the French President had accepted the invitation—marking another gesture to the world and heavily armed European powers of the Anglo-French diplomatic and military front—and will go to London early in 1939, accompanied by Mme. Lebrun.

The diplomatic talks were continued tonight at a state dinner for King George VI and Queen Elizabeth at the Quai D'Orsay, given by Bonnet as the final formal affair in honor of their majesties before the entourage quits Paris Friday after three days.

More than 50,000 French soldiers paraded in King George's honor up

C. P. Howard Dies; I. T. U.'s President Missed Re-election

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 21 (AP).—Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, fell dead of a heart attack at a hotel tonight.

Howard, who was secretary of the Committee for Industrial Organization, came to Colorado Springs last Sunday to attend a meeting of the board of trustees of the Union Printers' Home. Howard was defeated for the presidency of the I. T. U. by Claude M. Baker, of San Francisco. Howard succeeded James M. Lynch, of New York, to the I. T. U. presidency in 1926.

Sally Clark Sings, Dances Rhumba To Spite Idleness

Boston, July 21 (AP).—Sally Clark, 18-year-old debutante sister-in-law of John Roosevelt, tonight embarked on the career she hopes will avoid a "life of idleness."

The brunette made her debut as a singer-dancer on the roof garden of a downtown hotel, an experience "far more nervewracking," she confided, than serving as maid of honor to her sister Anne at the latter's marriage to the President's youngest son last month.

She sang three popular tunes in a mellow, throaty contralto, while scores of Boston's prettiest debutantes and their dancing partners spiritedly marked time around the microphone.

Later, she danced a waltz and a rumba.

Moscow, July 21.—Soviet Russia bluntly rejected today as "unjustified and unacceptable" a second Japanese demand for withdrawal of Soviet troops from territory Japan declared belonged to Manchukuo, and received in reply a threat of force.

A communique issued through Tass (Russian official news agency) said Russia regarded the territory, near the junction of Siberia, Manchukuo and Japanese Korea, as indisputably a part of Soviet Russia.

(Japanese contend Soviet troops invaded the area, near Changkufeng, July 11. In Tokyo the situation has been regarded as extremely serious. Tokyo newspapers have reported feverish activity by Soviet troops near Changkufeng.)

The communique said Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov told Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigimitsu that although threats of armed force might be good diplomacy elsewhere, "such methods will not succeed in Moscow."

For "Status Quo."

"Soviet troops in this area have no other aim except defense of the status quo on the Soviet frontier," Litvinov was quoted as telling the Japanese Ambassador.

"The Red army fully realizes its responsibility for the inviolability of these frontiers and is inspired by this responsibility in its actions. Full calm reigns on the frontier and this calm may be disturbed only by the Japanese-Manchurian side, which in such case will bear responsibility for the consequences."

The sharp Russian reply was in answer to new demands presented to the foreign office by Shigimitsu yesterday.

Then Shigimitsu said he did not

U. S. to Take Over Huge Dollar Line

Government to Rehabilitate Pacific Firm and Add to Its Fleet.

By Edward T. Folliard

The United States Maritime Commission is about to take over the huge Dollar Steamship Line, it was indicated yesterday, thereby greatly broadening the Federal Government's role as a ship operator.

Already the Government owns six steamship lines, operating 38 vessels in the foreign trade. Meantime, it is reconditioning three modern liners, the California, Virginia and Pennsylvania, which it recently bought from the Panama Pacific Line, and which are to be put on a new South American run. Also, under bankruptcy proceedings, the Government soon will acquire four vessels of the Munson Line.

With the acquisition of the Dollar Line, the Government fleet will be augmented by 13 ships which have been in the California-Orient and around-the-world services.

The Government, it is understood, not only will continue the trans-pacific and around-the-world services, but plans to rehabilitate and add to the Dollar fleet, constructing three sister ships of the President Coolidge and providing a service to the Orient comparable to that of Japan.

The Dollar Line, founded by the late, picturesque Capt. Robert Dollar, now owes the Maritime Commission $7,474,193. Last month Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the commission, announced a commission plan for solving the Dollar Line's financial problems. The line was to obtain a loan of $2,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It was to be

Lords Advise Britain to Pay On U. S. Debt

'Friction' with 'Friends' Must Be Ended First, Debaters Say.

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 21.—For the first time in years, Britain's war debt to the United States was extensively debated in Parliament today. The general sentiment expressed by members of the various political parties was that the government should resume payments of some sort on the debt without much more delay as a goodwill gesture to enlist American support to preserve peace or to win the next world war.

The unexpected debate arose, not in the House of Commons, where the question of the war debt is occasionally raised only to be promptly squelched by the government, but in the House of Lords where, seemingly, the government was taken by surprise. Lord Snell, leader of the Laborites in the upper house, described the debt owed to America as a "thorn in the flesh" of two great nations. It was, he said, a barrier in the middle of the road which should lead to mutual respect and goodwill.

"I personally think that the average American does not care 10 cents about the money itself, but feels that in a business transaction he has been let down," Lord Snell continued. "The American attitude toward European affairs is shaped by a sense of disappointment and frustration."

The Marquis of Lothian, the leader of the so-called Cliveden set and an influential adviser behind the scenes of government, also urged that the chancellor of the exchequer reopen the question of the American debt. He said there was a deep and bitter feeling in the United States that the British

Henry C. Rizer, 94, Youngest Of Civil War Colonels, Dead

Chief Clerk of Geologic Survey for 34 Years Once Was Editor.

Col. Henry C. Rizer, "youngest colonel" of the Civil War, and for 34 years chief clerk of the United States Geological Survey, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Elsie Rizer Woldike, 1464 Belmont street northwest. He was 94.

Born in Cumberland, Md., on February 1, 1844, Col. Rizer joined the Union Army forces in September, 1861, at the age of 17 years. After several years of campaigning with the Union troops, he attained the rank of colonel.

Col. Rizer remained with the army for the duration of the war, and on May 29, 1865 was honorably discharged.

Just last Memorial Day, Col. Rizer, accompanied by a fellow veteran of the Union Army and two of the Confederate Army, he flew over Arlington National Cemetery dropping flowers over the graves of their comrades. On Saturday he will be buried there.

Corrigan Shipping Plane; 'Wishes' He Was in Pickaback

Dublin, July 21 (AP).—Douglas G. Corrigan, California flier bundled his 9-year-old transatlantic plane onto the United States Maritime Commission steamship Lehigh today for its homecoming. He booked passage for himself on the American liner Manhattan, sailing from Cobh July 30.

Commenting on today's Atlantic crossing of the pick-a-back plane Mercury, Corrigan said:

"I sure wish I could have been on her. At least they knew where they were going. Perhaps it's better that way."

Corrigan landed at Dublin Monday with a grin and explained "compass trouble" had brought him and his $900 craft from New York to Ireland instead of California.

Secret Finance Of Anti-Strike 'Ads' Described

Utilities, Manufacturers Paid, Civic Associations Signed, Say Witnesses.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee learned yesterday that while civic organizations publicly sponsored a series of newspaper advertisements designed to impede the C. I. O.'s 1936 membership drive at Youngstown, Ohio, the ads were secretly financed by merchants, utilities and manufacturers.

Kenneth M. Lloyd, secretary of the Mahoning Valley Industrial Council, an organization of steelmakers, and Roy G. Hagstrom, chairman of a committee which had the advertising in charge, testified that the steel men paid $5,280 of the $8,280 that the campaign cost.

Other unpublicized contributors were the Ohio Edison Co., officials of Standard Oil, Gulf Refining, and Sears Roebuck, and local merchants and the Morris Plan Bank.

Signed by Clubs.

The advertisement, published in the Youngstown Vindicator, and in foreign language newspapers, appeared over the signatures of such organizations as the Kiwanis, Rotary, Lions and Optimist clubs, the Mahoning County Dental Society, the Youngstown Garden Forum and the Youngstown Women's City Club.

The rotary club did contribute $25, the Kiwanis Club $10 and the Clearing House Association $400, the only organizations listed among the sponsors which helped defray the cost.

Asked by Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, why the steel companies—which included Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube—and other manufacturers who paid the bill did not sign the advertising, Lloyd replied that he came to the "conclusion that the ads should be signed by neither industry nor labor."

None From Unions.

"Did you get any contributions for these advertisements from any labor organizations?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"Did it ever occur to you that the organization that was paying such a heavy part of the expense ought to have its name appear on the ads?"

Lloyd made an indistinguishable and apparently noncommital reply.

"The effectiveness of the ads was naturally determined by getting sponsors who were not involved in the dispute between labor and employers, wasn't it?" La Follette persisted. "It would have reduced the effectiveness of the ads to have them signed by those who paid for them, wouldn't it?"

"I don't think we were in such bad repute as that," said Lloyd.

Hagstrom said the advertising would have a "salutary effect" and keep the workers of Youngstown from becoming "dominated by outside leaders inimical to their interest."

Sokolsky Is Named.

Testimony was presented that George E. Sokolsky, author of a syndicated column on economic and industrial subjects, had prepared material at $1,000 a month for the National Association of Manufacturers and had been associated with Hill and Knowlton, of Cleveland, public relations firm serving numerous steel companies.

John W. Hill and Donald S. Knowlton, partners in the firm, testified that the company contracted with the National Association of Manufacturers to supply it with material at $1,000 a month, stating that Sokolsky was to do the work. He was paid the entire amount.

Sokolsky's name re-entered the hearing later with testimony by Lloyd that in the fall of 1936, the National Association of Manufacturers contributed $50 and furnished Sokolsky as the speaker for a "civic progress meeting" in Youngstown, Ohio. Lloyd conceded under questioning that the sponsorship of the meeting was hidden behind public announcements that it was arranged by the Mahoning Valley Foreman's Club.

$75,000 for Survey.

The committee also received evidence that after the strikes in "Little Steel," the Hill & Knowlton firm was paid $75,000 by a group of steel companies to conduct a survey of material of use in Little Steel's industrial relations.

To date, the witnesses said, the only materials supplied had been a weekly news digest, though some studies had been made.

Responding to a letter introduced yesterday suggesting that an effort be made to influence Charles N. Fiedelson, an editorial writer on the Birmingham Age-Herald, Fiedelson wired the committee today as follows:

"In view of testimony in letters of Republic officials, I wish to have the following inserted in the Record. I have been regional director, tenth region, the National Labor Relations Board, since October 15, 1935. I ceased being an editorial writer January 15, 1935, when I went to FLRA in Washington. So far as I know, no one has sought to Christianize me through the use of the right influence' as Mr. Mann (Kenneth Mann, a Republic Steel official) suggested. If pressure was applied to me, it was not felt."

Sokolsky Defends It.

New York, July 21 (AP).—George E. Sokolsky, who was mentioned in the civil liberties hearings in Washington as having received $1,000 for performing publicity services for the National Association of Manufacturers, said today that "the right of industrial organizations to seek and obtain expert advice is incontestible."

He denied he was "retained and paid $600 to color my views," an implication he said was in the news telephoned him from Washington.

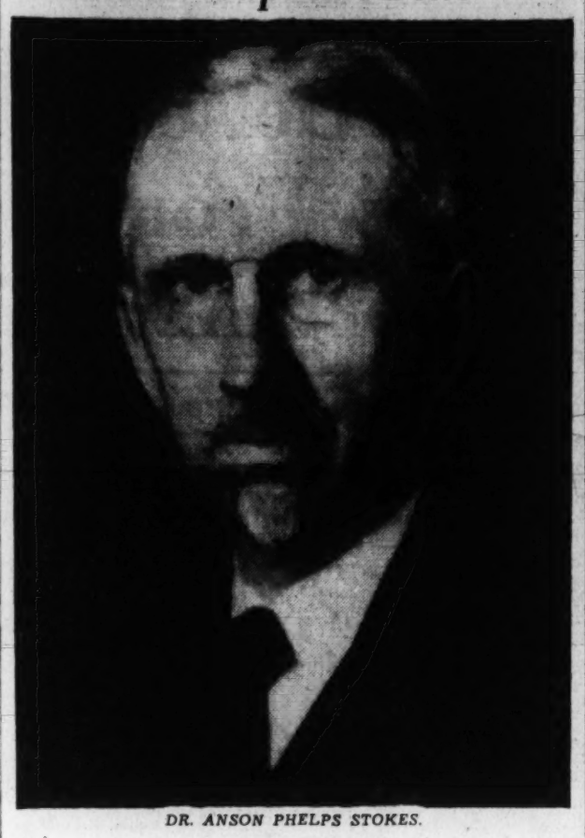
Railroads Rest Case For 15% Wage Cuts

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—Railroad executives, conferring with 18 brotherhoods about proposed 15 per cent wage reductions, completed presentation of their case to the unions today. The conference was adjourned until Monday when the brotherhoods will submit their arguments.

Another session was scheduled for tomorrow between the executives and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, conducting separate discussions.

Working for Washington

Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes Gives Time for Capital's Betterment



DR. ANSON PHELPS STOKES.

By Christine Sadler.

In addition to being able to write "most beautiful city" after its name, Washington should be interested also in having the best schools, the best living conditions, the best laws, the best police force, the best hospitals and the best relations between religious and racial groups.

This is the opinion of Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of the Washington Cathedral.

Especially is Dr. Stokes interested in better relationships between religious and racial groups and in driving home his conviction concerning the vital place of religion in a democracy. At the Cathedral Dr. Stokes exercises every opportunity to show the men who have been responsible for America's greatness have been truly religious and convinced of the major role of religion in a democratic country.

Organized Committee.

Five years ago Dr. Stokes organized the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital. This is a committee made up of Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish clergymen of Washington, organized for the purpose of co-operation among the sects.

As president of the Washington Housing Association, in which position he succeeded his cousin, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Dr. Stokes stresses his belief in good living conditions. How anyone can expect good citizens to come out of slum areas he does not see.

He has full faith in the ability of the local Alley Dwelling Authority—if given a chance—to eliminate the Washington slum areas.

Dr. Stokes, working through the Federation of Churches, organized the city's first committee on interracial co-operation.

The problems of the colored population of Washington he views as difficult and peculiar—made more complex by the fact in the local colored population are to be found at one end of the social scale a highly intellectual group and at the other a group which lives on an extremely low economic level.

Substantial progress has been made in making an adjustment of the interracial problems here, he thinks. Offices of the Phelps Stokes Fund, devoted to the betterment of interracial conditions, are in the Stokes residence at 2408 Massachusetts avenue. Dr. Stokes is its president.

Is Committee President.

Dr. Stokes was named chairman of the committee appointed at the citizens' mass meeting last winter to study local relief conditions. He thinks the survey being made this summer will result in elimination of obstacles that have clogged local relief administration.

Dr. Stokes plays a good game of tennis and classifies himself and Mrs. Stokes as among the few real walkers left in Washington. His new book, "Church and State in the United States," will be published during the winter. His main writing project—a history of the world's universities—has been in progress many years. Several more years will be required to finish it, he declares.

On Monday—A. B. Van Voorhees, president of the Washington Kiwanis Club, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

KennedyGets Nuns Out of Barcelona

London, July 21 (U.P.).—Twenty-eight Spanish nuns of the Order of the Sacred Heart, forced to remain in Barcelona since the outbreak of the civil war two years ago, were en route to refuge in England tonight as a result of intervention by United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

Shortly after his arrival in London last March Ambassador Kennedy went to the Sacred Heart Convent at Roehampton to arrange for the entrance of his daughters, Eunice, Patricia and Jeanne as students. The Rev. Mother Winifrede Archer-Shee, vicar superior of the Sacred Heart Order in Englnad, told him of the 34 nuns unable to leave Barcelona. Because of Kennedy's efforts, the loyalists agreed to let the nuns leave Spain.

Stark charges were "not true." Asked if Murray was drawing two salaries, one from WPA and one from the Kansas City government, Hopkins said he was not "concerned" as Murray "is working full time for us."

"I have confidence in him," said Hopkins. "I know, unless these charges stand up, Murray doesn't play politics with WPA in Missouri."

He said it was "clear" the letters sent him by Stark came from people supporting Stark's candidates, and added: "I am not so naive not to know this is a political fight."

Expects More Complaints.

Hopkins said he recognized that "before most of the primaries are over" there will be more complaints against WPA.

"These people (WPA workers) are not just a lot of robots," he said. "They are 3,000,000 American citizens and all of them have political views. Incidentally, I think I know what those views are.

"When they go out to lunch they talk politics. Any group sitting around eating lunch talks politics. . . .

"But I don't think you can tell anyone how to vote. Nobody has been able to deliver votes. People vote in their own interest."

Hopkins said among the WPA workers he had talked to, it was "obvious" they supported Roosevelt.

"What do you want me to do?" he asked reporters. "Suppose a man told other workers he had voted for Landon in 1936. Would you want me to fire him? Or would you want me to send him to an insane asylum?"

A reporter asked Hopkins if he had changed his mind since his former declaration that he was "no politician."

"Now I know I'm not," he laughed.

The work relief chieftain was asked if the 200,000 increase in the Southern WPA quotas was designed to meet any sudden unemployment demand, and he said the same seasonal unemployment situation had existed there for many years. Vehemently he repeated that it had "nothing to do with politics."

Seasonal Aid Held Need.

"In the agricultural South," he said, "what the people need is a few more months of work a year at the proper time. I propose to move on this front immediately, and in very substantial numbers. Cash income is very important to them. It is a manner of supplementing a way of living. I don't presume to say it solves their problem. But it is a prompt way of doing something for people who need it."

Hopkins said "the income of the South needs to be raised now," and this is "one way of righting the economic unbalance described by the President as constituting the Nation's No. 1 economic problem."

In recent weeks the WPA has twice raised wage scales in the South, once for unskilled workers and later for the better trained groups.

Total WPA rolls meanwhile reached a new year's peak of 2,898,597 for the week ended July 16, an increase of 45,383 over the preceding week. District of Columbia rolls increased 2,587 to a total of 11,431; Maryland quotas rose 136 to 14,679, and Virginia totals increased 72 to a total of 24,451.

Hamilton Implies Officials Eschew U.S. Lines Wisely

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said last night in a radio talk that a great many people in Pennsylvania believed the special legislative session called by Gov. George H. Earle was an attempt to "whitewash" himself and other Democrats of "charges of graft and corruption against his administration."

Hamilton called attention to the news, in The Washington Post yesterday, that most American officials, in traveling to Europe, used foreign passenger ships in preference to American-owned vessels.

Some in Washington suspect, he said, that the reason is the officials have seen confidential testimony reported to reflect lack of discipline, sailing uncertainties and other inconveniences due to labor troubles.

Business Tax Struck Blow In Court Test

Tax

the District stands to lose some $500,000 of the $2,000,000 net collected under last year's business tax, it was explained.

The District, even if Bailey's decision is sustained, would be required to repay only the taxes paid under protest, it was said. Persons who paid it without complaint would have no recourse under the law.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen called a conference of District officials for this morning upon learning of the court ruling for the purpose of determining what effect, if any, the decision may have on this year's tax collections.

Conference Called.

He said that Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan and others will be summoned to the parley.

Meanwhile Seal called a conference of his assistants, including Glenn Simmon, who represented the District, to decide what legal recourse will be followed. The choice, he indicated, appears to be between an outright appeal to the U. S. Court of Appeals and an attempt to apply the new apportionment theory of taxation to interstate commerce trade.

A difficulty with the latter course, however, is that the case in point has to do with last year's tax act, whereas the apportionment idea was not adopted until after passage of the current law.

Under this practice, which the U. S. Supreme Court has held constitutional as applied by a State, the District would tax only that portion of interstate commerce which it held was performed within the District.

Hazen expressed the belief that Justice Bailey's ruling would mean the abandonment of the business privilege tax by Congress if sustained.

"We never wanted the tax anyway," he recalled, "but Congress insisted on it."

He pointed out that if interstate commerce is to be exempt from the tax that the business man who operates from outside the Capital will have a distinct advantage over his Washington competitor.

"Why, it'll drive local business concerns over the line into Maryland or Virginia," he said.

Donovan was unperturbed by the court opinion and indicated he would not start revising his estimates of 1939 revenue until the litigation is ended.

Sustained on Two Points.

The District of Columbia was sustained in two of the three counts raised in its demurrer. Justice Bailey held (1) that the District Grocery Stores are carrying on business for economic gain, and (2) that they sell goods for profit and therefore are clearly liable for the tax on business done within the District.

W. Gwynn Gardiner, of Gardiner, Earnest & Gardiner, represented the District Grocery Stores.

District officials were inclined to believe that Justice Bailey's opinion with regard to Congress' powers in legislating for the District will have far-reaching effects if sustained, as heretofore Congressional committees handling local legislation have assumed usually that they are unrestricted except by the Constitution.

"It is well settled that Congress has all the powers of taxation over the District of Columbia that a State would have," said Justice Bailey.

"The question here is whether Congress has greater powers of taxation than a State would have.

"I cannot conceive that the grant of power to Congress to regulate commerce between the States was intended to include the power to burden it for a particular commodity . . . The tax in question . . . is solely for the benefit of the District of Columbia.

"The burden of this tax will fall, indirectly at least, upon those who live in the States and carry on commerce with those doing business here, as well as directly upon the latter.

"Upon the whole, and especially in view of the regulation of the Court of Appeals . . . I am of the opinion that Congress has no power to lay this burden upon interstate commerce."

The Gallup Poll

Survey Finds 36 Per Cent Believe Roosevelt Will Be Candidate for Third Term.

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, July 21.—Despite President Roosevelt's intimation that he wishes to retire in 1940, a substantial number of voters throughout the country think he will run for a third term, and an even greater number — approximately half the electorate—think he will run if he does run.

George Gallup

This sentiment is revealed in a country-wide Institute survey as the third term issue again takes on national importance, having been freshly raised last week when 4,000 Colorado steel workers petitioned the President to seek reelection.

Both Parties Asked.

The survey asked a cross-section of both Democrats and Republicans in every State the following questions:

"Do you think President Roosevelt will run for a third term?"

The vote was:

Yes	36%
No	64

"Do you think he will be elected if he runs?"

Yes	51%
No	49

The group of voters who think Roosevelt will run again includes approximately equal numbers of Democrats and Republicans. As for the secon question—whether he could win—there was a wide difference of party opinion, the Democrats saying "yes" by a large majority, the Republicans "no" by a similarly large majority.

The number of voters who think Roosevelt will seek re-election has increased appreciably during the last year. An Institute survey in April, 1937, found only 28 per cent [illegible] they thought Roosevelt would be candidate in 1940, as compared to 36 per cent today—an eight-point increase. This rise came despite an announcement from the President that his ambition was to turn his desk at the White House over to a successor in 1941.

Sentiment May Change.

While many voters think he might run again, previous Institute surveys have found the majority consistently opposed to a Roosevelt third term. Even Democrats have been against it. This sentiment is, however, subject to change. If the public learned that he definitely wanted to run and if he appeared to be the only man in the party with sufficient popularity to win, sentiment might easily veer around to the point of favoring his re-nomination.

Will Roosevelt Run-

Voters throughout the Nation were asked by the Institute whether they think President Roosevelt will run for a third term in 1940.

Here is the vote today, as compared to a year ago.

Do You Think Roosevelt Will Run Again?

	Yes.	No.

Inquiry Orders Impounding of TVA's Records

Congressmen Act After Aide Says Lilienthal Made 'Changes.'

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 21.—A Congressional investigation committee today ordered the minutes of the Tennessee Valley Authority's board of directors impounded, after a witness testified of "changed entries."

This action followed conclusion of testimony by deposed TVA Chairman Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, who gained a major point when the committee set aside regulations which had prevented his interviewing TVA employes without permission of officials.

Late today Charles Hoffman, assistant secretary to the board, testified that on "15 or 20 occasions" the minutes of the board had been changed, "mostly by Mr. Lilienthal." He referred to TVA Director David Lilienthal.

Counsel Is Quoted.

Hoffman also testified James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel, instructed him not to have any contact with Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, deposed chairman of the Federal agency.

Hoffman said Fly became concerned over two statements made by Lilienthal which went into the minutes November 2, 1933. The statements later were deleted from the record.

One of them, he said, was a statement that Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, agreed to make an arrangement under which certain electric properties were to be transferred from private to public ownership.

Lilienthal Explains.

The other, Hoffman testified, concerned applications of north Alabama towns for PWA loans for purchasing private power facilities.

Shortly after Hoffman's statements, the TVA released a letter from Lilienthal to Committee Chairman Vic Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, giving the director's explanation.

Agency Sets Up Clothing Factory As Cost Yardstick

By the Associated Press.

The Farm Security Administration announced today that it had agreed to let consumers' co-operatives take over a clothing factory at one of its projects and determine the cost of manufacturing wearing apparel under "the most favorable working conditions."

Spokesmen for the administration said the project was expected to provide a "yardstick" for measuring manufacturing costs.

A non-profit corporation, the Consumer Wholesale Clothiers, Inc., has been organized to operate the clothing factory at the Jersey Homestead Project, near Hightstown, N. J., officials said. The factory was purchased and equipped with a $200,000 Government loan to residents of the homestead, who work in the plant.

The new corporation has been authorized to sell products of the facotry to consumer co-operative organizations in all parts of the country agreeing to participate in the experiment.

Crowds Here Give Hughes Noisy Tribute

Pitcures, Page 10.

Howard Hughes, master flier, yesterday envisioned the future of aviation after being warmly received by Washington.

"I look forward to the day when we will see a ship as large as an ocean liner flying into New York Harbor and which will be moved to the docks by tugs after landing on the water," he declared in a speech at the Press Club luncheon.

After extending his thanks to the various Government departments which aided him on his flight, Hughes added "the day is not far distant when freight as well as passengers will be carried by the means already proved theoretically . . . the safest and quickest method of transportation."

At the luncheon, the young millionaire and his fellow fliers heard their exploit extolled and received the thanks of the Government from a fellow Texan, Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Shortly after arriving at the airport Hughes and his party were received by Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Alluding to universal acclaim for the accomplishment, Hull said it is "a very encouraging evidence that in the field of scientific achievement, differences of nationality are forgotten. This is true for the reason that the vast majority of scientific men throughout the world are working together in an unselfish spirit of co-operation toward the common goal of human advancement."

Hughes was greeted at the airport by a crowd of 5,000 persons. During the ride to the State Department the way was lined with aviation fans.

After the luncheon, as Hughes left the Press Building a crowd awaited him. One man dashed up to the Texas flier but was grabbed and roughly manhandled by the police.

"None of that, please," said Hughes, who then entered the crowd and signed the autograph book of the unidentified fan who had been "shoved around." It was one of the few times the millionaire aviator complied with requests for his signature.

Last night the fliers were the guests at dinner of Constantine Oumansky, charge d'affaires of the Soviet Republic in the absence of Ambassador Troyanovsky.

Included in Hughes' party were Lieut. Thomas Thurlow, navigator, and Mrs. Thurlow; Harry P. M. Connor, navigator, and Mrs. Connor; Richard Stoddart, radio engineer, and Mrs. Stoddart; Edward Lund, flight engineer; Albert I. Lodwick, manager of the party; Commander Howard Flanigan, representing Grover Whalen, president of the New York World's Fair; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Rockefeller, Miss Charlotte Hays, Hughes' secretary; Miss Marjore Towers, daughter of Capt. John H. Towers, assistant chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics; Conway Clark, R. R. Reining and S. B. Smith.

Miss Marion Eileen Thompson, of North Sydney, Nova Scotia, who was chosen queen at the International Radio Club session at Halifax, will visit New York and Atlantic City next month and participate in the resort's beauty parade as a Canadian guest beauty. Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Rudolph Ganz conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Thursday night in the fourth summer Program: Prelude to "Le Deluge" concert at the Potomac Watergate. (Saint-Saens), Symphony in D minor (Franck), Suite from "Merry Mount" (Howard Hanson), Elegy and Waltz from "Serenade for Strings" (Chaikovski), "Les Preludes" (Liszt).

"You are all heroes" was the compliment paid by Rudolph Ganz to the faithful auditors who had remained through a persistent rain last night to the final note of an uncurtailed program. That umbrella-roofed and mackintosh-wrapped remnant of the once larger audience complimented the guest conductor in return with cheers and applause, and seemed so reluctant to go that the affable director added two extra numbers—one, ironically enough, Debussy's "Clair de Lune," and the other the G minor Hungarian dance of Brahms. His final word was one of gratitude for an attentiveness under trying circumstances.

The opening number of the program, Saint-Saens' prelude to "Le Deluge," proved to be almost literally appropriate to the occasion. While it was in prograss, thunder rumbled among the Virginia hills and rain began to fall. By the time that it reached its end, a sharp shower was driving the more timid auditors from the seats. "Do you mind if we go on?" queried Mr. Ganz through the microphone, and a few dissentient voices were overwhelmed in a clamorous "No."

It is doubtful if the Franck symphony was ever before performed for an audience cowering in a steady downpour. No greater evidence could be adduced to the noble persuasiveness of this work than the fact that the listeners made light of their discomfort, in the intensity of their enjoyment. Despite the distraction of the inclement weather, the orchestra gave an eloquent reading which amply repaid the persevering music-lovers.

At the end of the symphony, it was announced that the concert would proceed without intermission. Nevertheless, the greater part of the auditors departed, thereby depriving themselves of another hour of music under less disagreeable conditions. For the rain slackened with the outset of the suite from Howard Hanson's opera, "Merry Mount," and thereafter thinned to a drizzle.

Mr. Howard's suite, performed for the first time in Washington, consists of the overture, a children's dance, a romantic duet, the prelude to the second act, and a Maypole dance. The music is vigorous and sinewy, and the melodic elements have an imaginative quality. It is unfortunate, however, that the composer is so determined to be "modern" that he has used dissonance frequently where it could very well have been spared. This harshness may not be so obtrusive in the opera itself, where the dramatic action intensifies emotion, but it detracts from the effectiveness of the suite as a concert piece.

The elegy and waltz from Chaikovski's "Serenade" for string orchestra have exactly the suavity which Mr. Hanson lacks. The vein of sentiment in Chaikovski's nature led him invariably to that appealing kind of melody which touches the popular taste. After these excerpts came the familiar "Les Preludes" of Liszt, that symphonic poem in which theatricality is nicely adjusted to sincere symbolism.

The downpour caused postponement of the flag-raising and prize-presenting ceremony, scheduled for last night, when the official flag of the Sunset Symphonies was to be hoisted for the first time to the breeze. Winner of the contest, W. Kingsley Utteridge, of 2221 Fortieth place northwest, will be present at the ceremonies next Sunday night.

Ickes Declares Rosendahl Has Ideas on Helium

Secretary of Interior Ickes, who has refused to sell American helium for German dirigibles, yesterday accused Commander Charles E. Rosendahl of changing his mind about the military value of the gas.

"I can't reconcile what he says now with what he said in his book," Ickes told reporters. "After being wined and dined in Germany, he comes back here and says helium has no military value."

Ickes yesterday recalled Rosendahl's book, "What About the Airship?" in which he spoke of helium as a "valuable military asset."

"On Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays," said Ickes, "he seems to think it is of military volue, but on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, he says it isn't.

"It seems a curious thing that an officer in the United States Navy, in view of his country's refusal to sell helium abroad, should suggest it violate the law laid down by Congress."

Lakehurst, N. J., July 21 (AP).—Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, in charge of the Naval Air Station here, asserted tonight that the dirigible no longer fitted into the military picture to any worthwhile extent in Europe.

America's most noted authority on lighter-than-air craft issued a statement answering Secretary Ickes' assertion that Rosendahl changed his mind about the military importance of helium after being "wined and dined" in Germany.

"The Washington statement," said Rosendahl, "is more than inaccurate, but undoubtedly due to an almost complete misunderstanding of what I have said and written on the subject at various times."

Roosevelt, Party Land Five Sharks, One 6 Feet Long

Aboard U. S. S. Houston, En Route to Panama, July 21 (AP).—Treacherous Clipperton Island, 675 miles off Acapulco, Mexico, was examined in the interest of science and navigation today by members of President Roosevelt's party, while the Chief Executive added to his laurels as a fisherman.

An exploration party headed by Prof. Waldo Schmitt, of the Smithsonian Institution, brought bags and tubs filled with bird, animal and marine specimens back to the Houston from the volcanic island.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt and those with him returned with five sharks, one measuring 6 feet in length, and a catch of other fish.

Pickaback Ship Lands at N. Y. After Sea Flight

10-Ton 'Papoose Craft' Ends Experimental Trip From Ireland.

By the Associated Press.

Port Washington, N. Y., July 21.—The experimental transatlantic flight of Great Britain's 10-ton "papoose plane," launched in the air over the Irish coast at 2 p. m., Eastern standard time, yesterday, ended in a smooth landing here at 3:06 p. m., Eastern standard time, today.

It was the first flight of its kind.

Tossed from the back of her "mother ship" at 3,000 feet, at Foynes, Ireland, the four-engined Mercury completed the 3,042-mile journey in 22 hours and 28 minutes flying time.

The ship, styled a "pick-a-back" plane, paused for two hours and 40 minutes at Boucherville, Que., Montreal's air harbor on the St. Lawrence River, before making the last leg to the Port Washington transatlantic air terminal.

Officials of British Imperial Airways had hoped the Mercury would set a new westward-crossing record of less than 11 hours, but it took almost twice the time expected, reaching Montreal in 20 hours 20 minutes.

Piloted by 28-year-old Capt. Donald C. T. Bennett, with Wireless Operator Albert J. Coster as the "crew," The Mercury brought a shipment of London newspapers and news-reels showing the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth on their state visit to Paris. The total cargo weighed half a ton.

The trip was an additional exploratory test of the North Atlantic routes over which Pan American Airways of the United States, Lufthansa of Germany, Air France and Imperial Airways hope to send planes on regular schedule within the next year or two.

The Mercury is a high-wing monoplane on floats, or pontoons, powered by four 340 horsepower engines. Its wing spread is 73 feet and its over-all length is 51 feet. As a normal plane, its gross weight is 14,000 pounds, but with an assisted takeoff by the "mother" ship its weight is stepped up to 20,500 pounds.

60,000 Austrian Jews Have Fled Since Nazi Coup

Special Cable to The Post.

Vienna, July 21.—According to figures published today the passport office of the Vienna police has issued 25,000 emigration permits to Jews since March 13, when Germany absorbed Austria.

If one adds to this figure the many who left Austria without permits, family members who were not counted, and persons who are Jews by race, but not by religion, one gets to a total of emigrants for the whole of Austria which must be near to 60,000. This is, in fact, the latest estimate in the quarters which are connected with the evacuation of Jews.

The official plan is to make this evacuation as complete as possible within a period of three years, counted from the day when Austria turned Nazi.

It goes hand in hand with the so-called "Aryanization" of Jewish property and firms. The estimates of the value of this property vary between $600,000,000 and $1,600,000,000. Authentic figures will only be available when the registration of the non-Aryan property, now under way, is finished.

The Austrian Voelkischer Beobachter says the application in Vienna for Aryanization now cover approximately one-half of the total business that was or still is in Jewish hands. Thirty per cent of all Jewish firms in this city have already been taken over by Aryans. In the provinces the percentage is much higher.

Hull Attends Ceremony Marking Treaty Signing

At the same time a treaty was signed at Buneos Aires yesterday by which Paraguay and Bolivia agreed to submit their 100-year-old conflict over the Gran Chaco to arbitration, Secretary of State Hull addressed a special session of the Pan American Union governing board in Washington. While Hull smiled approval, Pablo Max Insfran (left), Paraguayan Charge d'Affaires, and Luis Fernando Guachalla, Bolivian minister, shook hands on the strength of the treaty.

12 Neighbors Join U.S. to Ask An End to War

Pan-American Union Meets to Celebrate Signing of Chaco Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

Representatives of the United States and 12 other American Republics proclaimed to the world yesterday that public opinion on this continent demands an end to war.

They expressed this conviction at a special meeting of the governing board of the Pan-American Union, called by Secretary of State Hull to celebrate the signing of a peace treaty between Bolivia and Paraguay.

At Hull's suggestion, the board adopted unanimously a resolution praising the two South American countries for agreeing to refrain from further hostilities and to submit their ancient dispute over the Gran Chaco wilderness to the arbitration of the United States and five other American nations.

Hull Lauds Treaty.

After applauding the devotion of the negotiating governments to "the inter-American principle of the pacific settlement of international differences," the Hull resolution expressed conviction that:

"The signing of the present treaty would have been impossible unless there had existed a very real inter-American solidarity in support of our peace machinery and a powerful public opinion in all of our nations insistent upon the abolishment of war as an instrument of international policy."

Bolivian Minister Luis Fernando Guachalla and Paraguayan Charge d'Affaires Pablo Max Insfran replied to Hull's felicitations to their respective governments.

Pact Brings Holiday.

Buenos Aires, July 21 (AP).—A treaty by which Paraguay and Bolivia bound themselves to submit their 100-year-old conflict over the Gran Chaco to arbitration was signed here today.

The occasion was marked by manifestations in most South American nations, where it was hailed as a landmark in the progress of the Americas toward peace.

German Seaplane Hops for New York

New York, July 21 (U.P.).—The German seaplane Nordmeer took off from the catapult ship Schwabenland at Horta, Azores, for New York at 3 p. m. (E. S. T.), Pan-American Airways reported today.

The flight is the first of 17 survey flights planned for 1938 by the Deutsche Lufthansa.

The Nordmeer is expected at Port Washington, Long Island, about 7 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Wister, Novelist, Dies; Won Fame With 'Virginian'

North Kingstown, R. I., July 21 (AP).—Owen Wister, famous novelist, died of cerebral hemorrhage at his summer home here after an illness of only a day. He was 78.

Author of "The Virginian," he attended Harvard University with former President Theodore Roosevelt and they became close friends. Later, Wister wrote a book "Theodore Roosevelt, the Story of a Friendship, 1880-1919." None of Wister's later books attained the popularity of his "Virginian."

With him when he died were a daughter, Mrs. Walter Stokes, of Philadelphia, and three sons, Owen J. Wister, of New York, and William R. Wister and Charles K. B. Wister, both of Philadelphia. Another daughter, Mrs. Andrew Dasburg, of New Mexico, also survives.

Boy, 9, Is Killed As Roller Sled Is Hit by Auto

Robert Williams Dies as Toy Scoots Out of Alley Into Street.

Nine-year-old Robert Williams loved to ride things on wheels. He kept asking his mother, Mrs. Mildred E. Harper, 4602 Forty-third street northwest, for a scooter or bicycle, but she was afraid he might get hurt and refused.

Yesterday he borrowed a sled with wheels from a companion and coasted from an alley, down a little hill—and under the wheels of an automobile.

Eighth Precinct Policemen M. P. Creel and L. L. Olinger took the body to the morgue.

Mrs. Marie H. Eisinger, of 4300 Brandywine street northwest, driver of the automobile, was released in her attorney, Assistant District Attorney Raymond Sparks, pending coroner's inquest.

No charge was placed against Mrs. Eisinger because witnesses told police that her car moved at not more than 15 miles an hour, and that she made every possible effort to stop.

After the accident, neighborhood children ran for Mrs. Harper. When she came near her son's body she fainted.

Her husband, John G. Harper, yardmaster of the Griffith Consumer Co., came home later. He did not speak as he entered the room, but sat by her and put his arms about her. She continued to weep softly on his shoulder.

"He is broken up, too," neighbors said, "because, even if he is only the boy's stepfather, he has been a real father to him."

The 9-year-old boy's death brought the Washington traffic toll for the year to 48. No. 47 was recorded early yesterday when Joseph Lee, colored, 55, 666 Callan street northeast, died of injuries received Wednesday. There were 60 deaths at this time last year.

Meanwhile Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald scheduled inquests today in the deaths of Joseph Lee Davis, 3, 122 E street southeast, killed Wednesday, and Vincent J. Casey, 27, 2325 Fifteenth street northwest, RFC employe, who died July 8 from injuries received in an auto crash the day before.

Pay-Hour Benefits Stressed by Lubin

A quarter of a million employes in manufacturing industries will have their wages increased immediately and a million and a half others will be affected by overtime provisions of the new wages and hours legislation, effective October 24, Commissioner Isador Lubin, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, yesterday told the Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower Hotel.

"The wages and hours bill is intended to set a new plane of competition in business so that efficiency in operation will be rewarded rather than having the reward go to businesses which have in the past taken advantage of others by compelling employes to work long hours at low wages and the employment of children to bring about a cheaper production cost," he said.

Hotel Union to Expand.

A drive to unionize workers in all unorganized hotels here will begin this week, James McNamara, business agent for Local 80, the Hotel Service Workers, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, said yesterday.

Vandals Hurl Acid On Store Windows

Vandals who threw acid on plate glass windows yesterday caused damage estimated at $3,000 to the fronts of two downtown stores.

Simon Albert, manager of the David Max Glass Co., 912 Twelfth street northwest, reported $1,000 damage. Damage totaling $2,000 was done to windows at the L. Frank Co., 1200 F street northwest, L. G. Gregory, assistant manager, told police. He said the windows recently were installed by the David Max firm.

Attorney Paid As 'Promoter,' PWA Charges

Ickes Orders Quiz of Ohio Lawyer's Fee for Obtaining Grant.

Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator, yesterday instructed his legal department to investigate a new case of the "contingent fee" method of promoting PWA allotments which recently caused him to suspend several California projects because of alleged "lobbying" activities.

It involved a contract authorizing payment to William M. McLain, Warren, Ohio, lawyer, of 5 per cent of the $205,000 total cost of a proposed municipal power project in Newton Falls, Ohio, for which PWA recently made a grant of $92,250.

The payment, according to a contract made by the city council of Newton Falls in 1936, when the project was first broached, was to be made for "extraordinary services" over and beyond McLain's duties as legal counsel for the village. The fee, figured on the basis of the total cost as estimated by PWA, would be $10,250.

"This matter will be looked into," Ickes yesterday said, announcing reinstatement of one of the suspended California projects—South Laguna waterworks. Ickes said the president of the South Coast County water district declared that at no time had the organization employed "lobbyists" to secure PWA grants.

The group of California projects had been held up on allegation that Glenn E. Miller was promoting them on a "contingent fee" basis of only 1 per cent.

granted a subsidy of $3,000,000 a year for five years, and it was to be advanced $1,500,000 for reconditioning its 13 vessels covered by the subsidy contract.

However, there were certain conditions with which the company would have to comply.

R. Stanley Dollar, son of old Capt. Dollar and president of the line, and H. M. Lorber, vice president, balked at these conditions, and made a counter proposal which, it is understood, provided for the Government taking over the line.

Under the old ocean mail contracts, which were terminated by law on June 30, 1937, the Dollar Line received $23,724,137 from the Government. It is now operating under a six-month subsidy contract which expires Monday. On that day the company is to be taken over by the Maritime Commission.

The Government already has two directors on the board of the Dollar Line, Arthur B. Poole and J. Hugh Jackson, appointed in accordance with the terms of the subsidy contract.

The most serious aspect of what Joseph P. Kennedy, former commission chairman, called "a sick industry" is that of rehabilitation, the construction of new ships to take the place of the war-time or post-war vessels that now constitute such a large part of the merchant marine. Of the 33 ships for foreign trade now being built, 20 are for the account of the Maritime Commission.

fought in many battles but nary a wound. Shortly after the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox, he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1867. For 15 years he was in the private law practices.

Always interested in newspaper work, Col. Rizer gave up his law practices to assume the control of The Eureka Herald, of Eureka, Kans.

He was publisher and editor of this newspaper, which was a pioneer in the field of this State. In 1891 he came to Washington to become chief clerk of the United States Geological Survey, continuing in this office until his retirement 11 years ago at the age of 81.

At the time of his retirement he was paid tribute by scientists of foreign nations, as well as those of this country, with whom he had personal contact during his tenure in office.

When the monument to Maj. John Wesley Powell, first director of the Geological Survey, was dedicated at the Grand Canyon, Col. Rizer spoke there as the representative of the agency.

Col. Rizer was the son of Jacob and Mary Bluche Rizer, of Cumberland. He married Miss Clara Isabelle Rizer, of Chicago, who died in 1893.

Besides the daughter with whom he lived, Col. Rizer leaves another daughter, Isabelle Rizer Everett, of Austin, Tex., and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. at his residence, followed by military services at 10:30 at the Arlington Cemetery Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Labor Groups Unite On W. Va. Elections

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 21 (AP).—Members of the American Federation of Labor, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and C. I. O. factions united tonight at a mass meeting in indorsing slates of candidates in State Democratic and Republican primaries.

Democrats indorsed included Representative Andrew Edmiston for Congressman in the Third District and Barron Randolph for another term in the State Senate as well as four of 12 candidates for the House of Delegates.

Among Republicans indorsed were Ira L. Swiger, unopposed for the State Senate nomination and four candidates for the House of Delegates.

Russia Rejects Tokyo Threat Of Border War

Moscow

believe his government would be satisfied with the Soviet answer to previous representations July 15 and that steps must be taken to relax border tension, otherwise Japan would be compelled to consider the advisability of using force.

Maps cited by the Soviet government as basis for claim to the territory, he declared, could not be accepted as evidence because they had not been published anywhere.

To this, the communique said, "Comrade Litvinov voiced amazement that such an experienced diplomat as Shigimitsu used such a careless expression in connection with official maps which determine the boundary between states.

Worst Since 1937.

"Whether the maps were published or not, their importance is undiminished. It is strange to hear such arguments from a government which in practice does not feel obliged to publish all its engagements. It is hardly likely this government really believes secret agreements are not binding."

The tension is regarded in Tokyo as the most serious since the clash June 30, 1937, over two sandspit islands in the Amur River. A peaceful settlement was reached then only after a Russian gunboat had been sunk, another beached and a third put to flight by Japanese and Manchukuo artillery.

Disputed sovereignty was involved in both cases. In the issues now and a year ago Russia insisted Soviet troops were operating on Russian soil. Japan and Manchukuo contended both times they had invaded Manchukuo territory.

Treaty Map Shown.

The current crisis developed July 15, when Haruhiko Nishi, Japanese Charge d'Affaires at Moscow, called attention of the Russian foreign office to alleged movements of Russian troops near Changkufeng.

Russia, however, contended, the Japanese charges were baseless. Nishi was shown a map appended to a treaty made in 1869 which Tass (Soviet News Agency) said left no doubt Changkufeng was Russian territory.

Japan followed her first protest with a second, stiffer one. Instructions were telegraphed from Tokyo to Shigimitsu on the night of July 19 to protest directly to Litvinov.

Tokyo Belligerent.

In Tokyo, meanwhile, anti-Russian feeling mounted. Domei (Japanese News Agency) reported from Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, the Russian commander had been told to withdraw or "necessary steps" would be taken "with firm determination."

War handbills were distributed and 25 Japanese, carrying heavy canes and wearing the arm bands of an extremely nationalistic society, demonstrated at the Russian embassy.

The Russians declared they saw no importance in the incident but, July 21, Japanese press reports said Soviet forces had penetrated four miles into Manchukuo near Changkufeng, occupying a hilly area and erecting fortifications.

They accused the Russians of trebling their force of 40 men in the area, sending out reconnoitering airplanes and flashing searchlights.

"Soviet Russia's challenge to Japan and Manchukuo for a fight seems inevitable," the Tokyo newspaper Asahi said.

Offices to Quit Hankow.

Hankow, July 21 (U.P.).—Under pressure of the triple Japanese drive on Hankow all civil and administrative offices not directly connected with the military today were ordered to depart for Chungking, Szechuan Province, by the end of this month.

The order included the Chinese foreign office and the embassies, including that of the United States, are likewise to leave for Chungking.

A spokesman for the United States Embassy said Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson would leave for Chungking soon.

Japanese troops were reported concentrating for a tremendous drive on Chinese defenses near Kiukiang.

Lords Advise Britain to Pay On U. S. Debt

had taken advantage of the moratorium to say the debts were canceled and that was the end of it. He asked whether it would be possible for the government to resume token payments to Washington of £2,000,000 every half year, as evidence that Britain acknowledged the debt and meant to make a settlement when circumstances were favorable.

The debate was opened by Viscount Samuel, former leader of the Liberal party, who took advantage of a general debate on the national debt to ask what the government intended to do about its obligation to the United States, which has been ignored in recent budgets. Samuel explained he was bringing the matter up to dispel any idea the British debt to the United States was a closed chapter in history.

Replying for the government, Earl Stanhope hinted ever so delicately that tentative negotiations to settle the war debt already are under way. He said it was difficult to say something which might not be misunderstood, but he could say that "both countries had made considerable progress."

Britons and Americans, said Stanhope, are beginning to realize "we have so many things in common," although he thought it "unfortunate that we have no common foreign policy."

Germany Wants Talks.

London, July 21 (AP).—Assurances from Reichsfuehrer Hitler that Germany wants "a peaceful settlement of outstanding questions" reopened the door today for broad Anglo-German talks to sweep away Europe's war fears.

Prime Minister Chamberlain disclosed in the House of Commons that Hitler's adjutant, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, brought this message to Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax on the eve of the latter's departure for Paris with King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Reports to Hitler.

Munich, Germany, July 21 (AP).—Capt. Fritz Wiedemann reported today to Adolf Hitler, presumably on his London trip to sound out British officials on Anglo-German talks to ease European tension.

Rites for Brother Of Jay Franklin Set for Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hanover, N. H., July 21.—Funeral services for Paul S. Carter, 34, brother of John Franklin Carter, jr., whose writings, under the pen name of Jay Franklin, are familiar to hundreds of thousands of Americans, will be held at Williamstown, Mass., tomorrow.

Mr. Carter was formerly connected with the United States Forestry Service and the Farm Security Board. He died here Tuesday. He was proprietor of a camera shop here, and widely known in business and artistic circles.

A native of Williamstown, where he was born September 14, 1903, Mr. Carter attended St. Mark's School, in Massachusetts, and then went to Yale University for several years.

He left college to enter the photographic business and worked for some time for a New York firm. In 1932 he went to Germany and Austria to study the camera, and returned to the United States some months later to do free lance architectural photography.

Mr. Carter came to Washington to become a photographer with the Forestry Service, and did extensive work in the New England States, which he knew so well. Later he worked with Farm Security as a photographer and investigator. About two years ago he resigned.

Surviving are five brothers, a sister and his father.

A. W. Cowles Dies At Atlantic City

Arthur W. Cowles, 78, formerly principal examiner in the Patent Office, died yesterday in Atlantic City, where he had been living since his retirement in 1932.

For several years Mr. Cowles, who served with the Patent Office 42 years, had been in ill health. He was a native of Hartford, Conn., and came to Washington as a young man.

He was educated in the public schools of the District and at George Washington University law school. His widow, Mrs. Martha L. Cowles, is his sole survivor.

Funeral services will be held at the Chambers undertaking establishment tomorrow at 2 p. m. A private burial will follow.

Bite Moves Bossy After Pulleys Fail

San Diego, Calif., July 21 (U.P.). Seven men tried for hours with a block and tackle to get a cow out of San Diego River quicksand. Finally, Andy Gonzales had an idea. He bit the cow's tail. Bossy bawled, squirmed and shook herself right out of the quicksand.

Hull Delivers Mexico Rebuke On Seized Land

well to the oil property expropriation.

On March 30, the Secretary, asked for comment on the oil seizures, recounted the long list of expropriations of agrarian land, expounded this Government's stand that Mexico had a right to take over the properties, but must pay for them by compensation representing fair, assured and effective value to the previous owners.

He added that the taking over of the oil properties was but one incident in a long series of incidents of the same character and accordingly raised no new question.

Yesterday's note called attention to the "continuing expropriation . . . without adequate, effective and prompt compensation being made therefor."

Purposes "Unrelated."

It said that in extenuation, Mexico has asserted that it is trying to carry forward a program "for the social betterment of the masses of its people," but added:

"The purposes of this program, however desirable they may be, are entirely unrelated" to the issue of "whether the property of American nationals may be taken by the Mexican government without making prompt payment of just compensation to the owner in accordance with the universally recognized rules of law and equity."

The Secretary declared this country, also, has "been very actively pursuing a program of social betterment," citing efforts "to improve the share of the farmer in the national income, to provide better housing, the wider use of electric power at reasonable rates, and security against old age and unemployment . . ."

U. S. Has Expropriated.

Under the program the United States "has expropriated from foreigners as well as its own citizens properties of various kinds, such as submarginal and eroded lands to be retired from farming, slums to be cleared for housing projects, land for power dams, lands containing resources to be preserved for Government use."

But, he added: "In every case the Government of the United States has scrupulously observed the universally recognized principle of compensation and has reimbursed promptly and in cash the owners of the properties that have been expropriated."

He said that between 1915 and August 30, 1937, Mexico had taken over 161 moderate-sized properties of American citizens, but none has ever been paid for. Since 1937 other properties, chiefly farms of moderate size with a claimed value of $10,132,388, have been expropriated, exclusive of the "large land grants frequently mentioned in the press."

Calls It "Confiscation."

"Considering," the secretary said, "that expropriation was the free act of the Mexican government and the liability was voluntarily incurred by it, certainly on the basis of the record above stated, the United States Government cannot be accused of being unreasonable or impatient."

Then he added sternly:

"The taking of property without compensation, is not expropriation. It is confiscation. It is no less confiscation because there may be an expressed intent to pay at some time in the future."

Holding that Mexico "should be just as vitally interested in maintaining the integrity of the good neighbor policy as any other country," the secretary added:

"The whole structure of friendly intercourse, of international trade and commerce, and many other vital and mutually desirable relations between nations indispensable to their progress rest upon the single and hitherto solid foundation of respect on the part of governments and of peoples for each other's rights under international justice. The right of prompt and just compensation for expropriated property is a part of this structure."

The United States policy in regard to seizure of the oil properties of Americans has been in marked contrast with that of Great Britain, which engaged in sharp exchanges with Mexico and finally severed diplomatic relations. The United States, on the other hand, has pursued a policy of peaceful direct negotiations, seeking to work out a settlement. An official disinclination to accept the high valuation placed on the properties by American companies from whom they were taken has handicapped the efforts.

Mexicans Shocked.

Mexico City, July 21 (U.P.).—The proposal of Secretary of State Cordell Hull for international arbitration to determine monetary payments for expropriated American-owned farm lands, was believed tonight unacceptable to Mexico, which always has considered such procedure an adverse reflection on her sovereignty.

Hull's note came as a shock to the Mexican public.

The belief that the United States had taken a completely divergent view from that of Great Britain on the matters of the land expropriations and the recent expropriations of oil properties had been allowed to develop in Mexico during the past three months.

Mexican orators, quoting President Roosevelt's discussion at a recent Warm Springs (Ga.) press conference on the value of expropriated oil properties, often have gone to the extent of claiming that the White House supported President Cardenas' expropriation policy.

Dane Sees Daniels.

It was believed that the American note would be felt here more sharply than the suspension March 27 by Washington of purchases of Mexican silver.

It was believed here that President Cardenas' statements Tuesday night to foreign press correspondents regarding the irrevocable nature of the expropriation of foreign oil properties provoked Hull's note, although it did not mention the oil problem.

It was understood that the United States note was drafted after telephonic conversations between the State Department and United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels.

Daniels early today conferred with Foreign Secretary Eduardo Hay on the question of petroleum expropriation and indemnification.

Later the Danish minister, Fin Lund, who is handling British affairs in Mexico since severance of relations between the two countries, conferred with Daniels.

Rites Set Today For Capt. Hedekin

Funeral services for Capt. David D. Hedekin, 33, Infantry, U. S. Army, who died Wednesday at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., of injuries suffered in a polo game, will be held at 12:45 p. m. today in Section 6 of Arlington Cemetery, with Chaplain Ora J. Cohee officiating.

A native of Apache, Ariz., Capt. Hedekin was graduated from West Point and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry in 1927. He also was a graduate of the company officers' course at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga. At the time of his death he was on duty as aide to Brig. Gen. Robert O. Van Horn, Fort McPherson, Ga.

Capt. Hedekin is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Young Hedekin, of Fort McPherson; his parents, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles A. Hedekin, of Bethesda, Md., and a brother, Capt. Thomas B. Hedekin, Field Artillery, who is on duty with the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at Yale University.

3 Jews Die, 2 Hurt In Hillmen's Raid

Jerusalem, July 21 (AP).—Three Jews were killed and two wounded tonight when 20 hillmen swooped down on a well-boring gang encamped on the western shore of the Dead Sea. The band robbed the camp armory.

Another band entered Nablus and killed the head man of a nearby Arab village who was sitting in a cafe. A Jewish watchman guarding vineyards south of Haifa, focus of Arab-Jewish disorders, was ambushed and killed.

Franco's Italians Crack Loyalists' Line Near Viver

Hendaye, France (At the Spanish Frontier), July 21 (AP).—Spanish government war bulletins reported tonight Italian volunteers fighting with the insurgents had broken defense lines northwest of Viver, 34 miles northwest of Valencia.

Valencia advices said the attackers were held from entering the town by a heavy barrage.

The bulletins described the Italian brigades in action as the "Littorio" and the "Twenty-third of March."

Their attack, in which they swept over Ragudo Hill, two miles northwest of Viver, was preceded by warplane and artillery bombardments.

the broad Avenue de Paris at Versailles.

A half million spectators lining the avenues in front of the Bourbon Palace, where the Versailles Treaty was signed, saw war equipment developed only a few weeks ago.

Hundreds of military attaches of foreign embassies sat in the reviewing stand. Overhead, one-third of France's first-line fighting planes roared past.

At a signal, fleets of planes converged from four directions, having flown from Orleans, Rheims, Paris and Charters, and formed a perfect column that droned over the palace at only 1,000 feet.

There were 300-mile-an-hour Potez Morane fighting planes and a dozen types of the newest 2-mile-a-minute bombers. Two thousand pilots and gunners manned the 600 fighting ships.

King George, resplendent in the uniform of a field marshal of the British army, stood beside President Lebrun and Gen. Maurice Gamelin, vice president of the superior war council, and took the salute as the troops marched by.

At 10:30 a. m. Friday the royal entourage will leave for Villers-Bretonneux, where the King will inaugurate a monument to the Australian war dead, then travel to Calais, where the royal yacht Enchantress will be waiting to take the King and Queen back to England.

Franco-German Parley.

Paris, July 21 (AP)—The disclosure today that the chief of the French air general staff would visit Germany's air chief was believed to foreshadow a move by European powers for limitation of air armament or "neutralization" of civilian areas from aerial attack in case of war.

The visit by Gen. Joseph Vuillemin to Germany to confer with Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering was looked upon as one of the first steps toward general European friendship which may result from King George's state visit to France and the attendant Franco-British diplomatic conferences.

The unexpected arrival in Paris yesterday of Sir Cyril Newall, chief of the British air general staff, strengthened the belief of impending developments.

Studio Stuck With a Sticky Candy-Pulling

Paramount Ends a Short Movie Scene for Mere Fifteen 'Grand.'

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, July 21 (U.P.).—Paramount's taffy-pulling marathon reached its $15,000 climax at dusk today.

We stood around the sound stage all afternoon, first on one foot and then the other, but it was worth waiting for. Never has anybody seen such a deluge of lemon-flavored taffy as flew through the air and tangled the hair of the cast in "Paris Honeymoon."

A pair of authors many a month ago carelessly inserted in their manuscript a scene wherein Comedian Ben Blue was supposed to get a laugh by walking into the handiwork of two Bulgarian taffy pullers. It took the authors maybe 5 minutes to write that scene.

The studio has been turning it into a movie for a week, amidst such handicaps as only can befall a picture studio. A week ago Producer Harlan Thompson and Director Frank Tuttle vainly tested taffy pullers, on special taffy boiled on the spot by a taffy expert. The taffy was hot, but the pullers weren't. Things looked bad for Messrs Thompson and Tuttle.

Pullers Without "Pull."

When the news got out, things looked worse. They were deluged by telegrams and letters and phone calls from taffy pullers from Cincinnati and Milwaukee and hundreds of other taffy centers.

Taffy pullers pulled at the studio gates. Most impressive was Glenn Thompson (no relation to Producer Thompson), for 30 years the premier taffy puller of Santa Barbara, Calif. He made his own taffy and then he pulled it, though he said this was a practice upon which the health department frowned.

With the aid of both hands and either foot, he sent his taffy in spirals and loops and cascades. Producer Thompson and Tuttle hired him on the spot. They set the scene for shooting today at 1 p. m. Taffy Puller Thompson arrived with 100 pounds of taffy.

"Lemon flavored?" demanded Producer Thompson, taking a taste.

"I thought you'd want to nibble on it," said Taffy Puller Thompson.

Director Tuttle had the grips set up two taffy hooks on the wall and set Puller Thompson and an actor named Joe Garcia to pulling taffy. Both wore Paramount's idea of a Bulgarian burnoose, complete with red felt vest.

$15,000 Worth of Taffy.

With the camera grinding and the taffy looping and tailspinning through the scenery, Comedian Blue walked into the scene and got a rope of taffy around his neck. He fought and got 40 pounds of taffy in his hair.

Three stunt men, retained for that special purpose, struggled to remove Blue from the taffy. The succeeded only in getting stuck themselves. By then taffy was flying all over sound stage No. 9. When at last the scene was over, Taffy Puller Thompson wiped taffy from his eyebrows and walked over to his wife, who never had been inside a studio before in her life.

She said "Humpf."

Blue said he didn't like lemon flavor. Thompson said he thought the scene was fine. Tuttle said it even looked funny to him. The treasurer muttered that it had better be. Fifteen thousand dollars was a conservative estimate, in salaries, time, tests and taffy, of the cost of the lines those careless authors wrote.

Tyrone in Reunion After Rise to Fame

Two youngsters who started in the same play together three years ago and rose to fame, one in the films and the other on the stage, are holding a reunion in Hollywood.

They are Evelyn Abbott, who was "atmosphere" in Katharine Cornell's "Romeo and Juliet," and Tyrone Power, who played his first Broadway role, a small part, in the same production.

After "Romeo and Juliet," the two went into "St. Joan," where Tyrone was spotted by movie scouts and Miss Abbott was advanced by Katharine Cornell into leading roles in her plays. Miss Abbott will return to New England in July for a season in summer stock. Tyrone currently is appearing in Twentieth Century-Fox's "Suez," with Loretta Young and Annabella.

Camera Club Head Visits Movie Sets

One of the Nation's outstanding surgeons, Dr. Max Thorek, of Chicago, chose the "Ellis Island" set at Twentieth Century to do a little clinical work in Hollywood.

Surgery, however, didn't enter into the good doctor's visit to the studio. It was his hobby, photography, which was responsible for his call, made at the behest of his good friend, Gregory Ratoff, a member of the "Ellis Island" troupe.

With all the zeal of a visiting surgeon watching a major operation, Dr. Thorek studied the technique of Cinematographer Karl Freud as he filmed difficult and sensational scenes in the screenplay. Dr. Thorek is president of the American Camera Club, an organization of amateurs devoted to photography as an avocation.

De Mille Gets 100 Years of Journal

Cecil B. De Mille has acquired enough copies of the Illustrated London News to complete 100 years of England's great picture newspaper.

It is an addition to his family library of more than 6,000 volumes which collectors regard as more valuable than many rare books.

It will be consulted by the producer-director and his staff for data on "Union Pacific," the British publication's pictures of the building of that railroad being better than those in contemporary American publications, according to De Mille.

'Dead End' Kids Still Fight Law In 'Little Tough Guy' at Keith's

Billy Halop Leads Cast in Familiar Story of Underprivileged Youth in Big City; Judels' Fallacy 'Going Native' Beginning to Go. Olney Sell-Out; Notes of Theater.

"LITTLE Tough Guy," revealed to Washington audiences for the first time on the screen at RKO-Keith's yesterday, follows the dramatic pattern that seems to have been decided upon by all producers as the only melodramatic design that will effectively show off the sinister talents of the youthful players who have come to be known as the "Dead End" kids. It presents the full roster of these incorrigible young hoodlums, who already have scored decisively in both "Dead End" and "Crime School," with the exception of Leo Gorcey, who, on this occasion, is absent.

BELL.

It is the rebellious Billy Halop who assumes the stellar and title role in the present exhibit. In the role of Johnny Boylan, whose father is condemned to the chair for murder and denied a new trial, Billy becomes the leader of a gang of potential criminals subjected to all of the pernicious influences to be found in the squalor of a big city's slums. They begin as petty thieves who "lift" any trivial article not red hot or nailed down. The progress from these minor infractions of the law to more serious crimes that finally lead to gun-play, the death of one of the lads and another joust with the authorities on charges that are not so insignificant as swiping a string of sausages or a handful of apples. The intercession of family and friends, the compassion of a lenient judge and a seeming repentance on the part of the chief offender lead to climacteric regeneration of the "little tough guy" and a term of apparently ecstatic happiness as members of the boys' band at the reform school.

This is the formula that has carried down through the seasons from "Dead End" through "Crime School," "Boy of the Streets," "The Devil Is a Sissy" and all the other film plays that have dealt with the same general theme of juvenile delinquency and the manner of its cure. There is the added touch here of the youthful renegade born to riches who serves as treacherous young mentor for the less privileged kids whose bravado engages his interest—and his purse. For the rest, the characters of the play are about as usual—the lachrymose and complaining mother, the guardian-angel sister, her handsome and helpful young lover, the cops and the judge.

Like all of its predecessors in the same classification, "Little Tough Guy" bristles with action, is thickly sprinkled with episodic climaxes and relies heavily upon the comic capabilities of its adolescent stars for laughs. These essential elements have been nicely cared for by Brenda Weisburg and Gilson Brown in their screen adaptation of Miss Weisberg's original story and are enthusiastically executed by Master Halop, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell, Bernard Punsley, David Gorcey and Hally Chester, evidently pinch-hitting for Leo Gorcey. The bulk of the picture's burden falls upon the willing shoulders of Halop and Hall, two of the toughest young gentlemen now before the cameras. There is the unmistakable suggestion in Billy Halop's performance that he need not necessarily be restricted always to the depiction of a submerged youth to whom crime seems the only way out. One suspects that this young fellow, if given a chance, might turn out to be an able and versatile juvenile actor.

Marjorie Main once more is cast as an unhappy mother of the tenements and Helen Parrish, tossed in a little over her head, is a very young ingenue, making a valiant attempt to be a poised, helpful and dominant older sister. She gives, instead, the impression of being the baby of the family, more reliant than reliable as mental and moral ballast of the Boylans. Robert Wilcox is a handsome figure in the film's romantic background, with little to do to test his mettle. Jackie Searl, cast as the demoralizing Cyril Gerrard, still holds his lead among the juvenile experts in obnoxious roles.

An issue of the "Pathe Parade," Walt Disney's fantastic cartoon comedy in color, "Mickey's Trailer;" the Pathe News and a release of the "Screen Snapshots," devoted to screen stars as they were early in their careers and as they are today, add variety to a bill that suffers only from the familiar contour of its major feature.

"The Dragon," Lady Gregory's three-act, romantic fantasy, will be presented by the Blackfriar Institute of Catholic University in the University Gymnasium Theater on Monday, August 1, and in the National Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, the following evening. The play, originally produced by the Abbey Theater Players, in Dublin, deals with happenings in the royal household of mythical Ireland when the astrologer of the kingdom prophesies that the beautiful Princess is, as the idiom of Erin has it, "to be ate and devoured by a scaly green dragon from the North." A long and competent cast is being directed in the piece by Milton McGovern.

"Anything for a laugh" long has been the accepted slogan of the theater's comedians. Some of the boys—and some of the girls, too, for that matter—have been able to devise physical and vocal eccentricities that have practically become trade marks of their clowning. For example, Hugh Herbert's "woo-woo" and Martha Raye's "Yeah, Man" have to all intents and purposes, been adopted into the patois of the habitual kidders.

There is one veteran, however, who has not been so lucky. That is Charles Judels, one of the better of the dialecticians, who has of late contrived himself a treble vocal commotion which he deems no less than excruciating, judging from the persistence with which he has employed it in all of his recent pictures. This unique contribution to the sorrier things of life sounds like the whinny of a horse—that is, to everyone, probably but a horse!

Mr. Judels should try again. At present it is "a horse on him," as you will discover when, as and if you ever see "Snow Gets in Your Eyes," a comedy in which he whinnies all over the place. The shrill cry of an oyster calling its mate would be much more novel—and maybe funnier.

• • • •

The "Going Native Revue," staged annually in August at Loew's Capitol Theater, increasingly stimulates interest on the part of those with aspirations for the stage. Since the first announcement of the renewal of this feature this year, the Loew management has received many applications for parts in the production. Next Monday, so I am told, further announcement will be made as to the time and place auditions will be held. Any talented performer between the ages of 18 and 60 is eligible, no gender barred. Application forms are available at any Loew theater or any local drama desk. The blanks have arrived.

• • • •

The opening night for Elissa Landi in "The Lady Has a Heart," the inaugural attraction at Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater, has already been entirely sold out—what with many out-of-town delegations coming in for the premiere, keen local interest and whatnot.

There are still desirable seats available for all remaining performances during the initial week for those who wish to scurry around and secure them. But do not try to buy for next Monday night, because the box-offices have nothing left to sell.

• • • •

It is a popular misconception, so it seems, that "everybody goes to the movies." A widely read magazine explodes that theory by maintaining that there are 50,000,000 Americans who never go to the motion pictures, or, at best, attend the cinema theaters of the country on very rare occasions. This has piqued the curiosity of the Loew executives in Washington. They would like to know what city in America has the lowest per capita population of nonmoviegoers. If there are any residents of Washington who have never been to a motion picture theater, they might find themselves guests of the Loew management one of these fine days—or are these fine days? Anyhow, there's the hint and let your conscience be your guide!

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 21.—Everything's going up this year except sales at the box-office. Skirts, shorts.—Joan Crawford riding a bicycle around Metro lot in a pair of red ones that had the boys dizzy—eyebrows, hair piled high off the neck . . . even busts are higher.

HEDDA HOPPER

Went into a studio fitting room the other day and there, scattered about, were dozens of fake ones. They intrigued me, so I went into the subject a snip. All sizes, shapes, and made of different materials. Price was nothing to sneeze at, either. Some came as high as $15 and $25 a pair. The cutest were of softest white angora, which slipped into little inside pockets of a lace bra—looked like a kangaroo's pouch. The best were made of rubber sponges!

While Sam Goldwyn was looking at the hands of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning, he said, "Jim, my wife's are more beautiful than those. Remind me to have a bust of them made some day."

Dorothy Lamour has piled up some kind of a record. She's been on the screen two years, made 13 pictures, bought and paid for three annuities and started a trust fund. Until a month ago she lived in a cheap rented apartment. She paid cash for a new house in Coldwater Canyon. Drove a Ford till her hubby, Herbie Kay, bought her a Packard. Never had a chauffeur or personal maid and is just 22. Has no jewels or fancy dresses. But she's doing all right. What do you think?

Rosa Ponselle matched nature the other night in the Hollywood Bowl, dressed like a gold goddess. Her shadow on the back drop intrigued me—looked like an Egyptian figure, beautiful. She was in grand voice and I like her encores better than her main selections. Guess I'm too low-brow for super classical things. The Eddie Robinsons, Basil Rathbones, Woody Van Dykes, Gene Raymond, Louis B. Mayers were all there. Incidentally, it was Mr. Mayer's first trip to the bowl. Now he's crazy about it. I hear Rosa's test at Metro is swell.

We've lived here so long, we sort of take the bowl for granted, but we shouldn't. One of the most thrilling things here. Has given more lift to weary souls—sitting under nature's canopy of stars and moon, drinking in glorious music. Toscanini may be with us this summer. And we're almost certain to get Flagstad on her way home from Australia. Something for your memory book.

While I'm on nature, I must mention the beauty of the flowering yuccas covering our mountain ranges. Some blooms over 6 feet high. We call them Candles of the Lord. Jacaranda trees with blooms like delphinium. Flowering eucalyptus—puffballs of scarlet. Sun's afterglow, coloring limitless spaces of the Pacific from our Palisades. Hey, Hedda!— Is this a movie column?

Bill Robinson, Shirley Temple's favorite dancing partner and teacher, is opening his own academy out on Sunset Strip. He just taught Doris Duke Cromwell new routines for the Hawaiian Islands.

Out on man-made desert at 20th Century-Fox, there's a boy employed to shoot off a gun, which scares the birds away. Picture Annabella and Ty Power battling chirpchirps, instead of sandstorm, in "Suez."

Foreclosure.

A glass ant castle containing a thriving ant colony was the latest gift received from a fan by Marie Wilson, "dumb blonde" comedienne. She lost it two days later because she spent so much time watching the insects that she was late for her studio appointments.

Invented for Crows.

John Litel's "hired man" has invented a mechanical scarecrow that whirls and waves its arms while a wind-operated phonograph record emits hawk calls to scare the birds away.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

By Billy Rose

(Substituting for Mr. Lyons, who is on vacation.)

AS FAR AS I AM concerned, vaudeville is as dead as Kelcey's ancestors—this despite the fact that, for the last 10 weeks, I have presented a series of variety shows at the Casa Manana to amazing financial returns.

• • • •

DON'T GET ME WRONG—the vaudeville artist isn't dead. He's alive and over-acting in night clubs, honkey-tonks and WPA circuses. What is dead is the institution—the booking office—the bankroll that sponsored it.

• • • •

VAUDEVILLE HAS a chance if George White will supervise its selection and presentation at one theater, Earl Carroll at another and Clifford Fischer at a third. But for "booking office" vaudeville—a form of entertainment that was assembled by a booking office representative behind a desk—order the tombstone and hang out the crepe. In my opinion, this type of hit-and-miss producing is definitely finished.

• • • •

THE AVERAGE BOOKER and agent is a glib fellow when you meet him at Lindy's or Ruben's, but put him behind the footlights and the chances are he won't find the stage door exit.

• • • •

WITH FEW EXCEPTIONS, no one knows less about an act than an actor. They're a darling bunch of boys and girls, but they need definite supervision.

• • • •

THE AVERAGE ACT is twice too long. For various reasons, it has been padded beyond audience endurance. Its music is generally orchestrated very poorly. The act, as a rule, is dressed badly and routined inexpertly. Instead of building to a natural climax, it defeats itself by a series of anti-climaxes.

• • • •

AND THE REASON I am pessimistic about this entertainment is that the track is much faster today than it was 15 years ago, by a twist of the dial, without any admission charge, the public listens to the best comics—W. C. Fields, Fred Allen, Fanny Brice, Jack Benney, Eddie Cantor, et cetera, et cetera.

• • • •

THIS HIGHLY CRITICAL, non-paying audience is familiar with most of the stock jokes. Five years it stopped laughing at the gags that were once the basis of the "next-to-closing" acts.

• • • •

The AVERAGE VAUDEVILLE orchestra will no longer do. The sour seven-piece variety combination sounds pretty sad after listening to Toscanini and Stokowski, on one hand, and Benny Goodman and Guy Lombardo on the other.

• • • •

THE AVERAGE MOTION picture cathedral is not suited to the projection of variety entertainment. Whenever a theater has over 2,000 seats the sophisticated vaudevillian is a dead pigeon. The lifting of an eyebrow, the intimate gesture, the sudden twist of the head, the double "take-'em"—the variety artist depends on all of them. To one sitting halfway back in a big movie theater, the artist on the stage looks like Little Billy.

• • • •

I CAN HEAR THE BROTHER in the back row saying: "Well, why not use some of the smaller theaters?"

• • • •

MOST OF THESE SMALLER theaters are shuttered. They are pretty shoddy affairs compared to the heavily carpeted and chandeliered motion picture temples that the public has been accustomed to. People may long for vaudeville, but you can't show it to them in a tomb.

• • • •

SUPPOSE WE COULD overcome this? Suppose we could find a super Santa Claus who would establish a dozen 1,500-seat bandboxes in key cities? To populate these stages weekly, we would need a couple of hundred acts—and the long and short of it is that the average vaudevillian hasn't got an act.

• • • •

THAT'S NOT HIS FAULT. For 10 years there has been no incentive for him to get one. In the old days there was a pot of gold at the end of the vaudeville rainbow and a gent with a good variety act could look forward to one to two years' continuous playing time. Today a mighty circuit like Loew's can only offer him a week in New York and a week in Washington.

• • • •

THE POPULAR PASTIME around a booking office is to blame it all on the unions. As far as I am concerned, this is so much poppycock. I have never dealt with any labor organization that was stupidly arbitrary. Essentially, the theatrical union heads are men who once functioned in the theater. Properly approached, they will all play ball.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Disabled American Veterans have issued a brace of resolutions requesting the Civil Service Commission to use Veterans Administration physicians in the physical examination of former service men seeking Federal jobs. E. Claude Babcock, of the D. A. V., says bluntly that certain examiners employed by the Commission have disqualified veterans whose physical fitness had been attested by V. A. doctors. He claims to have more than a score of complaints of this nature. It is a serious charge, with two major implications: There is the allegation that certain examiners are deliberately discouraging the employment of veterans or else are giving such superficial examinations as would not bring to light the more profound findings made previously by the V. A. physicians.

However well founded are the complaints that have come to Mr. Babcock, the Civil Service Commission should immediately make an investigation to clear away, or correct, a situation that holds possibilities of some very bad feeling.

U. F. W. A. President Jacob Baker writes his membership:

"This fall the entire membership of the House of Representatives and one-third of the Senate must come before the American public for election. Before that they must in many States yet emerge successfully from primary elections or State conventions. Many of these candidates are progressive and liberal and therefore friendly to U. F. W. A.'s aims."

He points out the union's five-point legislative program and urges the membership to write postal cards to the Congressmen as an inquiry on how they stand toward the bills. "Keep the postcards going. Also if it is convenient you ought to send delegates around to campaign headquarters and put the questions to the candidates in person."

Then, apparently recalling the President's injunction (Executive Orders of June 24) against Federal workers mixing up in politics, Mr. Baker reminds: "As an inquiry it is wholly proper for Government employes to do this. It is an inquiry, however, that will remind the folks who are campaigning that we have a program and may win additional support to it."

The strictest interpreter of the rules which have traditionally forbidden employe participation in politics couldn't say that this action is without the law. And by every token, Federal employes have a right to an interest in their own Government, especially in such phases as affect themselves. But we pity the already jittery Congressman, beset from home and now from Washington alike. If the postal cards are numerous enough, or the personal delegations sizeable enough, the Congressmen will certainly ponder on the wisdom of voting for the five-point legislative program—they will for use if a census is taken of the postal card senders and delegates and enough are found to be voters from back home!

A pleasant journey to Alice Harvey, fair secretary to Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri, who left here the other night in a car and a rainstorm for the Ozarl to help the Congressman through the forthcoming political joust. As a teller of Ozark tales she has no peer. And if, someday, she doesn't put those stories in book it will be because of pure laziness—because of pure laziness, we repeat. Such talk is required to move 'em!

Happenings: Some Veterans Administration employes in the lower grades are being deprived of opportunities to transfer to more desirable positions within the Administration because adequate publicity is not being given to existing vacancies. U. F. W. A. Local 15 soon will submit evidence showing that V. A. workers have been overlooked in the selection of personnel to fill more desirable low grade vacancies. It will be charged that these vacancies were filled from without the Administration—although competent people might have been secured from within . . .

Warren J. Moore and J. Murray Parker (GAO) are arranging for the annual outing of Sigma Nu Phi, international legal fraternity, to be held Saturday at Breezy Point Beach. Members of the chapter who are employed by Uncle Sam are reminded that the motor caravan will leave Washington College of Law, 2000 G street, at 2 p. m.

Civil Service Commissioner Harry Mitchell speaks tonight to the District Department, A. F. G. E. The hour is 8, in the Hamilton Hotel . . . Fred Fetter, member of the I. D. R. A. orchestra, has transferred from Reclamation to Public Works . . . There are over 1,000 war veterans in Interior and PWA, consequently a movement is afoot to establish an Interior veterans' post. Frank Werner, PWA ace photographer, is among those feeling out sentiment.

Now that Drags Wolf and Foolish Bear, Gros Ventre Indians, have brought the rains to North Dakota (by returning a sacred charm), we try to recall if it was they who made the delightful remark about Washington. In any event, a couple of Indians were asked what they thought of the Capital. "Too many people in such a small town," one of them grunted.

Span to Be Faced In Pink Granite

Stone facings of the new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge will be constructed of pink granite, the most expensive material on which bids were asked, the District Commissioners decided yesterday.

The contract accordingly will be awarded to the Penkler Construction Co., of Cincinnati, for its low bid of $1,844,234, including $23,000 to remove the existing span.

Pink granite was chosen after it had been recommended by the Fine Arts Commission, the Board of Trade and other organizations.

Builders Warned On Schools Delay

Contractors engaged on school projects were notified yesterday by District Engineer Department officials that no delays will be tolerated despite the uncertainity as to whether union steamfitters are on a protest strike against award of a contract to an open shop firm.

Steamfitters yesterday reported for work at the Lennox vocational school, it was learned, and were reported at the District Building to be returning to the Bundy School.

D. C. Numbers Suspect Is Held for Grand Jury

U. S. Commissioner Turnage yesterday ordered Theodore Brown, colored, 50, 720 S street northwest, held for the grand jury on charges of operating a lottery and possessing numbers slips.

Brown was arrested earlier in the day at his home by Sergt. George C. Deyce, and officers of the vice squad. The officers said they found six cents in marked money and a quantity of numbers slips.

Baptists Warned Of 'Racketeering'

Roanoke, Va., July 21 (AP).—The Valley Baptist Association brought its 111th session to a close here with a warning from Dr. S. B. Houghton, of Danville, to beware of "racketeering" within the church and high-pressure evangelists "who set up their tents around the corner."

Dr. Houghton also advised care in the use of the radio by the ministry, expressing the belief it was causing many smaller churches to suffer.

Consider this fact about Gin:

Gordon's has the Advantage of LIQUEUR QUALITY & HIGH PROOF, 94.4

Gordon's is supreme because it has the definite advantage of Liqueur Quality and High Proof, 94.4. This advantage means a great deal to you! For Liqueur Quality means richer flavor—velvety smoothness. And High Proof, 94.4—means sustained flavor—drinks that never taste thin. Give yourself this advantage—by asking for Gordon's when ordering gin by the bottle or the drink!

The Bailey Tax Decision.

Justice Jennings Bailey's decision yesterday on the District's business privilege tax created something of a sensation largely because it was misinterpreted. It does not apply, as some reports indicated, to the existing law. The case arose under the old law replaced by the District tax act of 1938. Since that portion of the act which the court held invalid has been substantially changed, it does not appear that the decision will cut off any portion of the local community's revenue from the present law.

The old law imposed a tax on all business done in the District. Taxes were collected upon gross receipts from transactions here, even though such transactions were effected by firms of Maryland, Virginia or other States. The court held that such levies are an invalid burden on interstate commerce. There was no question whatever as to the validity of the tax as it applied to transactions by local companies.

Under the new law taxes are laid upon only a portion of the receipts of outside firms doing business in the District. In calculating the amount of the tax, for example, manufacturing costs incurred elsewhere are excluded. But since sales take place in the District, the selling expenses are subject to the tax. By thus segregating the receipts from interstate transactions, it is believed that the weakness of the former act has been overcome. The Supreme Court has upheld similar arrangements in State tax laws.

In many respects the most interesting part of the decision is Justice Bailey's conclusion that in legislating for the District Congress is subjected to the constitutional limitations of a State legislature. Should that reasoning be rejected, Congress could lay any sort of burden upon the commerce between the District and the States solely for the benefit of the local community. On the other hand, if this conclusion should be finally sustained it might permanently thwart the District's efforts to secure an income tax. For if Congress acts as a State legislature when dealing with District matters it probably could not tax Federal employes. And with this large category of taxpayers excluded, an income tax would be grossly inequitable.

Since this part of the decision is of obviously great importance to the community, officials would do well to appeal for final settlement in the Supreme Court. As a supplement to the current tax study, the District certainly ought to know how far the power of Congress to lay taxes for its benefit extends.

"Piggy-Back" Plane.

Before anything else, what is all this about a "pick-a-back" plane? The indicated expression, to the best of our rompered memory, is "piggy-back." True, the dictionaries describe this as a mere variant of "pick-a-back" and cite all manner of ancient screeds to justify a preference for the latter. But lexicographers are an anglophilial lot generally. This department will stick to the American form of "piggy-back."

With that point clear, we proceed to the matter of the third transatlantic flight within a fortnight. As in the case of the other two, the most arresting aspect of the British aerial jaunt to Montreal and New York was its calm accomplishment. In the words of a press report of the journey, "The trip was uneventful."

To illustrate the magnitude of the achievement someone once said that the biggest possible news in railroading was the safe arrival of an express train. Apparently much the same sort of reminder would now apply to transatlantic flying. It seems impossible that the world could have developed such casualness in the short space of 11 years since it turned itself inside out cheering Lindbergh's feat.

But so it has. And, as Howard Hughes remarked at luncheon here yesterday, the time is not far off when the Atlantic and all other oceans will be flown with complete precision. It was largely to speed this day that he himself essayed his globe-girdling flight and that the British "piggy-back" experiment was undertaken. It seems doubtful, however, whether the latter will yield the ultimate secret of transoceanic flying. Interesting as tandem take-offs may be from a military point of view, they can scarcely be feasible for the giant commercial craft confidently described by experts as the planes of tomorrow.

The President's Opportunity.

Since Congress adjourned, a far-reaching change of attitude has come over the country. In place of the gloom engendered by mounting unemployment and falling business indices, the general outlook is now much more optimistic. The upturn in business and industrial activity is no longer open to question. No one can foresee, of course, how long this recovery movement will be sustained. But the fact that a turn has been made should have a significant effect upon Administration policies now being pursued.

To some extent the current improvement is undoubtedly a product of the Government's spending program. An outpouring of Federal money means orders for industry, jobs for some of the unemployed, more spending power and more demand for goods. Many other factors, however, have contributed to the turn in the business cycle. Inventories have been exhausted or sharply curtailed. Unsatisfied demands for goods of various types have accumulated. If the present upturn were merely a product of governmental spending it would be far from a conclusive sign of better times.

The Administration has every reason to be pleased at the turn events have taken. Once more the President may be inclined to say: "We planned it that way." This time, however, it should be more clearly recognized that the upturn itself has brought a great responsibility. It is not too soon to begin thinking about ways and means of preventing this movement from being merely a rapid spurt, to be followed by another devastating collapse.

High Government officials have contended that a sharp reduction of Government spending was a major factor in the depression which began about a year ago. If a similar mistake is to be avoided now, expenditures will not be permitted to reach a peak from which a sharp drop would be inevitable. Everyone knows that the country cannot continue indefinitely spending at the maximum rate authorized by the last Congress. Bankruptcy would be the unavoidable result of an attempt to sustain economic activity in that way.

The theory behind the current public works program is that a comparatively little Government spending will "prime the pump" of private industry and produce a continued "flow" of prosperity. If his experiment is to be properly conducted, the priming will be diminished as soon as the "pump" attains sufficient suction to draw water. Real pump-priming is never continued when a normal flow has been obtained.

The chief advantage of the flexible spending program finally approved by Congress is that it gives the President authority to taper off expenditures as the recovery program gets under way. That may become the President's greatest responsibility during the next few months.

Relaxation of the pressure to spend would be particularly salutary in the case of such agencies as the Rural Electrification Administration and the United States Housing Authority. No permanent gain is likely to be made by imposing emergency spending tasks upon long-term agencies that are doing good work on a limited scale. When such organizations spend or loan enormous sums in a hurry, the lasting value of their program is invariably adversely affected.

The improved economic outlook gives the Administration a great opportunity to re-examine its spending program in the interests of stability over a long period. If planning of this type is to operate at all successfully, artificial stimuli must be carefully controlled on the upward climb. And there is no better time to begin considering such restraints than when the upward turn of the cycle begins.

It Won't Stay Put.

Not so very long ago Senator Minton of Indiana rang the changes in the recurrent theme that American newspapers are biased against the New Deal and will not print comment favorable to it.

Now it appears from testimony presented to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee this week that one major steel company has manifested an equal dissatisfaction with the attitude of certain newspapers, although for precisely the opposite reason. In Alabama the company felt that the Fourth Estate was unduly friendly to the New Deal, the C. I. O. and other phenomena and agencies viewed with distaste by some industrialists. It was decided, therefore, to put pressure on the newspapers, through personal friends of the publishers and through advertisers, to get the journals to see the light.

The result of their efforts is most revealing. The district manager of Republic Steel, writing to the president of the company, after a visit to the publisher of the Birmingham Age-Herald, said he did not feel this visit "did any good." Of the editor of another Birmingham newspaper it was sorrowfully concluded that "he won't stay put."

American journalism has many faults, as any working newspaperman would be the first to admit. But more often than not the bias is in favor of getting at the truth and playing no favorites. There is certainly no better proof of the essential independence of the American press than the fact that it can so readily be subjected to simultaneous attack from diametrically opposing critics.

Antitrust Procedure.

When Thurman Arnold took office as Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice he announced that at the beginning of each prosecution there should be an official explanation of the reasons for bringing suit and the results aimed at.

In the suit against eight leading companies in the motion picture industry this new policy of seeking to clarify issues for the guidance of business is followed. Definitely rejecting the practice of giving advance advisory opinions to businessmen seeking to avoid conflict with the antitrust laws, the Department of Justice affirms in a preliminary statement that without a judicial proceeding it is not in a "position to inform industry of what arrangements it will accept."

One cannot but think that if the Department of Justice had pursued a consistent policy of law enforcement in the past under successive Administrations, it might by this time have developed a body of interpretative rules that would have cleared up the obscurities of our antitrust legislation. As Mr. Arnold himself has said, there is no way of avoiding the use of discretion and judgment in the conduct of the antitrust division.

Because that is true, businessmen have suffered from constant changes in enforcement policy resulting from the differing views of officials charged with administering the antitrust laws. The ineffectiveness of advisory opinions is chiefly due to an instability of purpose rather than to any inherent defects of this method of clarification.

Mr. Arnold's approach has the virtue of being carefully defined. And if continued long enough, it will no doubt provide businessmen with certain guides enabling them to steer clear of the legal entanglements of antitrust laws. Will H. Hays, for instance, in a statement conspicuous for its tactful restraint, welcomes "the prospect of a comprehensive, fair and conclusive endeavor to clarify the application of existing laws to the trade customs inherent in the development of the motion picture industry."

The fact that practices of long standing such as those complained of in the present suit are still subject to a test of legality is a serious indictment of our methods of law enforcement. In the present case, the Department of Justice is patently doubtful whether the system of producer-exhibitor control and other practices of which it disapproves constitute an illegal restraint of trade. Its conclusion that the particular type of vertical combination existing in the industry is obstructive of free and open competition and not in the best interests of the public is after all merely an opinion.

The merits and disadvantages of existing arrangements have been discussed and investigated in great detail and it seems doubtful whether new light will be thrown on the debatable questions at issue. But the legal outcome of the suit will be awaited with a great deal of interest not only by the motion picture industry but by numerous other industries in which integration has developed powerful vertical organizations dangerous to weaker competitors. The Department of Justice has therefore performed a service in explaining frankly why it has brought this suit. At the same time, there is ground for challenging its readiness to prosecute in order to expose the deficiencies of the law with a view to its amendment.

If many exploratory prosecutions were undertaken chiefly for the purpose of showing Congress how to strengthen the law in accordance with the desires of Department of Justice officials, businessmen would be uncertain what to expect next. No matter how clear and precise official statements of aims might be, industry would be thrown into a state of perpetual turmoil. At the present moment a joint legislative-executive committee is engaged in exploring the question of monopoly with a view to amendment of the antitrust laws. That method of inquiry being under way, it becomes the more desirable that Department of Justice prosecutions should not further tangle an already confused issue.

In New York City it is against the law to play an accordion on a ferryboat. An excellent law, that, but it doesn't cover enough territory.

But how could the meek inherit the earth when there wouldn't be any lawyers here to draw up the conveyance papers?

Tit For Tat.

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

On festive political occasions the wags have reported that Maine intended to secede. But none, so far as we know, has suggested annexation to Canada.

However, that little matter is being taken care of by a liberal member of the House of Commons in Ottawa. He suggests that the Canadian government seek annexation of a small sliver of Maine jutting into the Province of Quebec.

Maybe the State department could arrange a fair exchange. We could swap that little slice of Maine for a sliver of southwestern Ontario, where the Canadian City of Windsor rubs elbows with Detroit.

It ought to be easy to peddle that idea in New Deal Washington. And while they are at it State Department officials might consider Canadian offers for parts of Vermont.

Fairfax Commuters' Proposals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The members of the recently organized Fairfax Commuters League wish to present to the Washington public and those who act for it, through the metropolitan press, their urgent desire that suburban transportation into Washington from Fairfax County shall be improved. In particular we urge that the cars (buses) of the Arlington & Fairfax Auto Railroad Co. be given the right to operate over the streets of Washington, delivering passengers, without change, to their destination.

At present the facilities for transfer of passengers of this line arriving at Rosslyn are entirely unsatisfactory. It is common for passengers arriving at Rosslyn from Virginia to wait 10 to 15 minutes for street cars to carry them on to Washington. Passengers traveling from the city to Fairfax County frequently fail to make connections from the streetcars to the auto railers, and have to lose an hour in Rosslyn. Were the buses permitted to operate from downtown Washington this transfer trouble would be cut out and a big step taken in the direction of better transportation for the commuters of Fairfax County.

It is our belief that this would also contribute to the general welfare by reduction of traffic congestion upon the streets. We are assured by many persons now commuting by private automobiles that they will use company facilities when the company is able to handle its traffic properly. Particularly, we believe that this will reduce much the traffic on M street in Georgetown, while increasing the number of people passing through the business section of Georgetown. We foresee a considerable increase of business for Georgetown stores as a result of this arrangement. The use of Washington streets by the Arlington & Fairfax Auto Railroad Co. will in no way interfere with the streetcar lines of Washington, since those buses will operate entirely on the pavement while within the District.

We wish here to state our appreciation of the efforts of Mr. Franklin K. Lane, president of the Arlington & Fairfax, to secure the downtown terminal in Washington. We believe the time now fully ripe for the accomplishment of his purpose. We believe also that the public spirited citizens of Washington will understand the need for this improvement, and will approve the efforts to obtain it.

Price Of Health.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. Fishbein was just about right when he said that it was not medical care people needed so much as food, clothing and proper housing, to attain health. I have known a very few people who told me they had never been ill, never had a cold and never had a doctor! I know a woman who has had ten children without a doctor in the house.

Every effect must have a cause, and no amount of medical care or legislation will produce health unless people care to pay the price in proper habits of living. No one can force health upon persons who don't care enough about it to pay its price.

Several million dollars have been appropriated to establish a research laboratory at Bethesda, Md., for the study of poliomyelitis. Many doctors and bacteriologists will be employed at big salaries. They will seek a "cure" and a "preventative" for that disease by infecting monkeys with the disease. I may be wrong, but I think their labors will be in vain. H. B. BRADFORD.

The Later Immigrants.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt recently reminded a gathering of the Daughters of the American Revolution that in America we are descended from revolutionaries and immigrants. Our differences are only in the number of generations that separate us from our ancestors.

Your correspondent, "Americus," might bear this in mind. Probably among the later immigrants he finds it hard "to like" are the Italians, Germans, Poles, Jews, Slavs, the Spanish-speaking peoples and the Irish. Yet it was these groups who did much to build and make America as we know it.

Vendor's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have a point to make in behalf of many hard-working men who, like myself, have families and are having a hard time to live.

Vendors who work day and night trying to earn a few cents by selling ice cream, peanuts, candy, etc., are arrested and fined from $10 to $25 for venturing near a park or Government building sidewalk, even when they are called by a prospective customer. Meantime, crooks, pickpockets and holdup men roam our fair city free.

Criticism Begins At Home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We often read of criticism against foreign dictators and their nations. This week's papers have carried many a glaring headline and news of sensational nature. We criticize the three leading ethic-breaking nations of the world, and speak with a derisive smile of dire results that are sure to follow for their lack of common sense. They are, so we are told, murderers, treaty-breakers, baby-killers and monsters in the guise of mankind. Editorials blast merrily away at their methods.

Then, after reading the foreign news, one turns to news of a domestic nature. Here we see that for the first time in many years only two men have been lynched in the South for a given period. In the next column we see that various States are pressing for indictment of politicians accused of methods not quite in accordance with political ethics. On the next page we see that certain organizations are accused of depriving citizens of their personal liberties which they so vigorously deny. Then beneath the above column we find that business is sure to be on the uptrend this fall. Then we note that big business is preparing to reduce wages. In black figures we note that this year for the first six months we have sacrificed thousands of lives on the altar of carelessness. Motor vehicles are being improved in the factor of speed so that when a pedestrian or otherwise is so unfortunate as to become a victim, the execution is accomplished in a very efficient manner.

All bear witness to a very careless administration of justice and the protection of the welfare of the average citizen.

Now, may I ask, why are we so adverse to everything foreign when here we have all the evils of a modern age and very little in the way of improvement? Why not a campaign of clean politics, business, living, etc.? Why not forget the other fellow across the pond and do a little readjusting here where adjusting is really needed. How about cleaning house at home before we supervise the cleaning of our neighbor's home no matter how lacking he may be in cleanliness?

English Usage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the matter of "English as she is writ," the taxpayer who complains that he has been "getting it in the neck from the New Deal," does not offend against truth nor against current newspaper English usage. Yet he is not suffering as the result of "conscious effort" any more than the man who gets typhoid in Mexico. My earlier letter to The Post was not a plea for fine writing, but for intelligible expression.

The present-day atavistic tendency to a wider use of capital letters is not entirely due to the example of George Ade. Today the upper case letters are used whenever their employment makes for clarity or precision, and contributes to the ease of the reader; e. g., "The New Administration is a very bad administration" is as sound in typography as it is in sentiment. The man who suffers from the New Deal may make a "conscious effort" to obtain a new deal.

HOWARD PITCHER OKIE.

Note To Mr. Waltman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Says a writer in The Post of July 20: "Mr. Waltman must find something more substantial in the way of argument than he did in his (Sunday) article to draw the people away from Roosevelt."

One might add that Mr. Michelson might draw more to Roosevelt if he quit harping on the virtues of the reform pap and the ancient glories of the early New Deal reign, which we now know by heart. Continuous rehashing inclines the cynical to believe it is put on to blind the gullible to the later abysmal failures — 12,000,000 unemployed, the debt and the parades of golden pump primings.

But the comment interests me because I'd received a letter from a friend of mine who heard both speeches and voted New Deal twice. "I blame the man who carpentered the speech more than I do Roosevelt for that little bone about the weather. But if one's memory is so notoriously bad, however suave and charming the manner of speech, why parade the fact? When that charming lack of memory extends to a host of campaign promises and resolutions about businesslike conduct of government, the public should feel concern."

Now petty bickering is the life-blood of politics, and while Mr. Waltman can never hope to keep up with the coterie of masters employed by the New Deal with public funds, he deserves credit for trying. Or as a veteran politician once advised a tyro: "Son, never try to take the bunk out of politics, because when you do, what the hell have you got left?"

Let Mr. Waltman attack that incredible mess, the social security swindle, the future war chest. It's doing more (and I can cite instances) to alienate and disgust thousands of Roosevelt followers than any other New Deal folble. So full of kinks and tape that one is appalled by the thought of the bureaucracy that will fasten around it, Mr. Waltman would have material to engage him through the 1940 election. And Mr. Michelson, as an offset to what is disclosed, would be forced to rehash again for the gullible consumption the departed glories of the early New Deal.

Radio "Intrusion."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are there only three who think as Mrs. Biggs, Mr. Grey and I do about the intrusion of Roosevelt "personality plus" on regular radio programs? We suffer the high office of President of the United States to be exploited. But must we listen to a lot of insincerities, the nature of which can be predicted in advance? The Post Impressionist

Peter Repentant.

I HOPE that for all my Washington years the Phillips Art Gallery will continue to hang the two portrayals of the "Repentant Peter," an El Greco and a Goya, in the same room. 'Tis a small enough request, it seems to me, from a faithful sailor aboard the good ship of state. These two pictures are now thus happily hung, or at least they were until a few days ago. You will find them in that long library-like chamber on the ground floor, the room which looks as though it would rustle sensuously to scholarly discourse as a sycamore rustles to the passing breeze.

El Greco's Peter, so luminously poignant you go to him at once, is hung midway of the long wall on the windowless side of the room. I personally have a penchant for El Greco, particularly in those works in which he limns some human being against infinity—one who has tussled long hours with the devil and finally beheld God. For El Greco could look straight past the fleshly frontiers and see the soul burning brightly within. Some clumsy old woman, threading her way through the impatient traffic, might draw a careless "Poor thing" from you or me, and that would but mean that she was not like us, didn't have as many pairs of silk stockings or something of the sort. But El Greco would paint her in all her tired shapelessness against an infinity of stormy sky, and in the art gallery we would raise our heads to gaze upon her monumental soul.

His Peter is an old man whose spirit has been tilted to eternity for, lo, these many years. His face, framed by the white of hair and beard, is sorrowful and beseeching. At the same time, it has the glory in it of one who has stepped out of all dross as he would step out of a pair of old overalls. Before this miracle of great artistry, you desert even your favorite train of thought to exult in the majesty of his enduring repentance. It is sincere and beautiful and constant. You know that for all the long years this world has meant nothing to him, that it suddenly ceased to interest him on that evening when as a young man turned craven he had cried out with an oath, "I do not know the man." Immediately he had gone away and wept in horror and shame, and from that moment has proceeded steadfastly to this sublimity of a wholly contrite soul.

Now if you will turn around to the end wall you will see Goya's "Repentant Peter." I like Goya, too. An honest man, he painted what he saw, and, looking past the fleshly frontiers, he was wont to see the greedy animal within. His Peter is a squat little man, his bald pate turned to heaven, his hands clasped in supplication. At the moment he is given up to a touching repentance, but in spite of his devout absorption you know at once that he is incapable of an all-time sorrow. He is too earthly for that. His soul is too shifty. He is too much the quidnunc, the conniver, the crafty good fellow.

Nevertheless, this roly-poly man has been capable of great devotion, no less sincere, though more flickering, than that of the other Peter. His unreliable soul has swelled with love for the Master who called him one day and after whom he trotted from village to village. It was wholly in the nature of things that, scared to the depths of his robust stomach on that fateful evening, he had hung around the palace in skulking anxiety, and when taxed with the friendship had cried out with an oath, "I do not know the man." Then he had gone away and blubbered because he had hurt one who loved him and whom he loved, and he did not know what to do about it. His shame was not so fine that he would writhe over this or that nuance of his betrayal. Nor was it so all-consuming that in its fire he would grow beyond mortal stature. But periodically, through the years he has felt a heartsick sense of loss and has cried out to be forgiven.

As you stand between the two portrayals by two great artists, you have a feeling that you might meet El Greco's Peter by the shore of some lake, and would know as he came toward him, his blue robes flapping, the keys swinging at his girdle, that he belonged to that infinity against which he was carved so mightily.

And you would know that the most likely place to come upon the other keeper of the keys would be some roadside tavern. There amidst uproar and joviality and the quaffing of ale, a stray word might recall to him that evening in the palace, and in tears he would pluck at your sleeve, insisting that you listen carefully to just how it all happened.

'V. D.' Patients.

NOW THAT the names of the venereal diseases are practically household words and the Government has undertaken to fight them, it should be permissible to consider the reasons for the attitude of those doctors who either refuse to handle such practice at all or demand cash on the line from venereal patients before they will undertake to treat them. Such conduct may seem brutal and might even be construed as a violation of the doctor's oath, but wait.

PEGLER.

When the Devil is sick the Devil a monk would be, and it is a truth of many such invalids that they are almost pious, if not quite so, in their fright when they first answer sick call. But it seems to be a characteristic of both diseases that confidence and optimism return when the outward symptoms are checked. Thereafter the patient is likely to neglect to report for further treatment, violate instructions as to diet and other matters and to forget to pay the doctor. Ingratitude is more pronounced in such patients than in sufferers from other maladies, although the doctors encounter enough of it in all other lines of practice.

Doctors have no illusions about the solemn resolutions of patients, knowing that fear wears off and that even medical students and internes who have been viewing the most terrifying consequences may go out on their nights off and take the same chances that an ignorant bum takes because he knows no better.

KNOWLEDGE OF the risk, even past experience, is no sure, permanent deterrent, and the mature medical man develops a hard-boiled, practical, but not necessarily cynical, attitude toward venereal patients.

Some of them simply deliver such patients over to specialists who have a straight business scale of treatment, demanding a certain amount in advance and further payments, always slightly in advance of the course, as treatment goes on, so that the patients will not lose interest. Many others in general practice have a flat rate for the course, payable in advance. Some cases require more treatment than others, but that is unpredictable. They average up.

On this basis of the experience of private doctors a considerable percentage of the patients who will take advantage of the public facilities will drop from the clinic rolls as soon as they think they are out of the woods. They will feel better and they will decide that, even though they may not be cured to the satisfaction of the doctors, they are cured enough. They will then go their merry way, many of them with plenty of money for down payments on new cars or for liquor or non-essentials, until presently they come down again of their own poison or of reinfection.

WHEN THEY report back to start over again the public doctors will have no choice in the matter. They will have to begin at the beginning, even though they feel sure the patients will drift away again after certain early results have been obtained. To make sure of complete treatment it would be necessary to impound such patients or place them under bonds which charity cases could not afford to post.

Medical science and society probably will be able to diminish venereal disease by teaching prophylaxis and by treatment, but there will always be a proportion—and a rather large proportion, at that—of infected persons who will refuse to go down the line and get cured, because they are too shiftless and irresponsible. The restrictions interfere with their convenience, and, anyway, the treatment is free and will still be free if the disease should kick back at some future time, as it doubtless will.

This is one line of medical work which most doctors in private practice, aside from the venereal specialists, will be glad to waive over to the public facilities. The venereals are—not all but too many of them—bad patients, bad pays and a few cuts below the responsible and respectable grade in their communities.

The doctor spends much time and money learning his business, he has to pay rent and buy groceries and shoes for the baby, and it naturally burns him up to see his venereals with unpaid bills on his books buying drinks for ladies at Joe's Bar and Grill or driving up Main street in new second-hand jalopies.

Nation Resists Presumption Of Third Reich That German-Speaking Majority Can Be Included In 'Grossdeutschland.'

By Bertram Pickard.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

IS GERMAN-SPEAKING Switzerland another potential Sudetenland? What do the German-speaking Swiss themselves think of Hitler's racial doctrines and their possible application some day to their own country? In submitting an objective answer to these questions, I am drawing upon the general observations of a 12 years' residence in Switzerland and upon the answers received to a questionnaire I sent recently to a number of German-speaking Swiss citizens, including a banker, a civil servant, a pastor, a business man and a social worker.

It should be noted that I speak of German-speaking Switzerland and not of German Switzerland. Even that needs qualification, for, although German is one of the four official languages of Switzerland and taught in the schools for purposes of reading and writing, in everyday conversation amongst themselves the German-speaking Swiss habitually do not speak German at all but their famous dialect Schweitzer Deutsch.

Historic Background Needed For Understanding.

TO UNDERSTAND the present situation, it is essential to keep in mind certain historic facts.

Early Swiss history was neither more nor less than a long, and eventually successful, struggle against the Hapsburgs. The formal separation of the Swiss Confederation from the Holy Roman Empire came with the Treaty of Westphalia in 1648, but the effective separation really dates from the Treaty of Basle nearly a century and a half earlier, in 1499.

It is interesting to recall also, as further evidence of definite divergence of the German and German-Swiss streams, that Luther and Zwingli found it hard to agree. It is said that in fact there was more community of outlook and mentality between Zwingli and Calvin (a Frenchman) than between the German-Swiss and the German.

Nevertheless, despite the fact that Switzerland held aloof from the Thirty Years War and the long struggle for supremacy in Greater Germany between Prussia and Austria, it appears to be true that, between the Franco-Prussian War of 1870 and the outbreak of the World War in 1914, cultural and economic relations between Germany and German-speaking Switzerland were intense.

One of my correspondents, in this connection, states that certain German propaganda notions (e. g., the inferiority of the French race) became widely held at that time, though the sympathy for Germany decreased during the course of the war. Another correspondent confirms this by recalling how, when he was mobilized in 1914, his commanding officer bluntly said it would be pleasant to take part in "knocking down the French," but that of course Switzerland would have to stay neutral!

Nazi Influence Seen Among Younger Swiss.

IT COULD NOT be said that there ever was a pro-German party in Switzerland in any organized sense whether before, during or after the war. But it is true to say that, with the rise of National Socialism in Germany, many young people in Switzerland were influenced by the Nazi ideology.

The so-called "Frontists" in Swiss politics were organized very much on the Nazi model. But, although adopting the "leader principle" and the anti-Communist (and sometimes even the anti-Jewish) tactics of the Nazis, there is no doubt that consciously the Frontists are highly patriotic and have no idea whatever of leading their country into the Reich.

But Swiss public opinion in general—and nowhere more strongly than in German-speaking Switzerland—is much disturbed lest subscription to the Nazi Weltanschauung methods should weaken those democratic bases of the Swiss Confederation without which the state of Switzerland would fall apart, and so a prey to Nazi ambitions.

True, Switzerland has received many categoric assurances that the Third Reich has no designs upon her.

In his Reichstag speech of May 21, 1935, Adolf Hitler said: "We Germans have every occasion to be glad that there is a state on our frontier with a population that is to a great extent German, with great inner firmness and possessing real and actual independence."

Again, in an interview with a former President of Switzerland (M. Schulthess) on February 23, 1937, in Berlin, Hitler gave the following more specific assurances. "At all times," he said, "whatever may happen, we will respect the inviolability and neutrality of Switzerland. I say this most definitely. I have never given cause for any other view. I authorize you to communicate this declaration to your government for communication to the Swiss people."

But the Swiss were not, and are not, reassured. They recall other promises and assurances given concerning the independence and integrity of Austria. And from their own frontier they had an unrivaled view of how an Anschluss may be effected.

The reactions to it were as striking as they were swift. The unanimous demand for a return to absolute neutrality is well known, leading as it did to the formal recognition of Switzerland's unique position by the League of Nations.

What perhaps is not so well known are the internal political repercussions. For example, the drawing together of all the political parties and the reaffirmation of democratic ideals was very noteworthy. Doubts about the Frontists" were so much increased that in the municipal elections at Zurich, which followed shortly after the Anschluss, all the ten seats occupied by the party were lost.

Questionnaire Finds No Fear Of Nazi Coup.

IN REPLY TO whether there was any serious fear that Germany might have designs upon Swiss independence and territorial integrity, my correspondents agreed one and all that, apart from the possible risks of a European war, there was no likelihood of any early menace from Hitler's Reich.

But, on the other hand, there was also general agreement that there has been, and still is, an insidious propaganda going on in the more extreme Nazi circles which reveals clearly enough a prevalent assumption that the German-speaking Swiss are Germans after all and, therefore, potential converts to the idea of eventual inclusion in Greater Germany.

Much has been said about language maps. The fact that, in Germany, maps are circulated in which most of Switzerland is painted the same color as Germany and Austria is not of itself objectionable. I have seen Swiss linguistic maps of exactly the same character. But when such maps are used in conjunction with the slogan "One People, One State, One Leader;" or when, as the Gazette de Lausanne reposed not long ago, the 3,000,000 German-speaking inhabitants of Switzerland were spoken of in Nazi publications as "Germans living beyond the frontiers," the case is very different.

It is this sort of propaganda that frightens and angers the Swiss. One Swiss paper, the St. Galler Tageblatt, put it: "Let these racist crudities stop once for all. Switzerland is not a German country; every inch of it belongs to the Swiss people . . . Switzerland is not a German state; nor yet an Italian state; it is a Swiss state, created by the common effort of the Swiss people, and preserved by the free will of that people."

The Swiss are afraid because of what Anschluss might mean for the Swiss economic structure by such devices, for example, as the strangulation of the famous Gothard Railway, which formerly carried so much traffic between Germany and Italy, or, again, the organized defection of Germany's tourists away from Switzerland to the Tyrol.

But, whatever policy Germany may pursue toward Switzerland, there is no shadow of doubt that the Swiss people as a whole, and not least the German-speaking majority, are passionately opposed to the racial doctrines of the Third Reich and are more determined than ever they were to remain loyal to their ancient democratic institutions and traditions.

Ring Around A Region.

TAKING AMERICA APART to see what makes it tick is a task for giants. We learned eight years ago that there was none such in New York or in anybody's chamber of commerce. We have since lost the illusion that there would be any in Washington, even at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. Good as they were, Tocqueville and Bryce couldn't get a complete grip on this grand and glorious and sometimes goofy continent of ours. There is no ray of hope that Europe will soon send us better analysts than those two nineteenth-century observers.

Maybe it's a job for that Man from Mars. While awaiting his arrival, study and report, "American Regionalism" (Holt, $5), is likely, I imagine, to stand for many a day as one of the best explanations of what makes the wheels go round in the towns, on the farms and in the craniums making up the United States.

In this scholarly, thorough-going synthesis by Howard W. Odum, one of the seers of Chapel Hill, and his collaborator, Harry Estill Moore, the Northerner may find the answer to the puzzle of the Southerner's thought and behavior, tastes and habits, and the folks in Dixie will come upon more than one explanation as to why the Yankee and the Midwesterner, and the Californian differ so greatly from them and from one another, and yet share so much in common. For the New Dealers who are striving with all their might and a good deal of your money to make the country over in a non-stop flight from Reality to Utopia, "American Regionalism" should be made compulsory reading.

THERE ARE, INDEED, certain passages in the book that only "brain trusters" could absorb without squirming in their seats. It may make sense to them to read in the introductory note about the "new pluralism of the American Nation," to ponder "realistic boundaries and units susceptible of social implementation as major regions," to be told that the States, "are cultural and societal as well as political," and to have regionalism defined as a "new American social economy and societal determination." But such professorial ponderosity isn't going to make horse sense to the people the authors are writing about and presumably are writing for. Happily, let me immediately add, Messrs. Odum and Moore get most of their socio-something-or-other sentences off their typewriters at the outset. They then buckle down to talking rather straight American for nearly all their remaining 600 pages.

Their text is "implemented" with scores of illustrative, informative charts and there are generous quotations on all manner of Americana. For their honey these busy bees of research have gone to every sort of human flower in the American garden, to Lewis Mumford and William Allen White, to Thomas Jefferson and Stuart Chase, to scores of others, including the logician who reasoned it out why people in the Southwest go to more picnics and buy fewer ice skates in the course of a year than the inhabitants of Maine or Minnesota.

Messrs. Odum and Moore divide the United States into six regions—the Northeast and its New England, the Southeast and its old South, the Middle States and their Middle West, the Far West and its California, the Northwest and its great plains, the Southwest and its Texas. They find, with Dr. William Fielding Ogburn, that faster transportation and transmission, and other inventions and developments, have meant that the region has replaced the county and State as a basis for economic and social organization.

IN EXPLORING the six regions, both historically and currently, the authors take along with them such authorities as geographers, anthropologists, economists, political scientists, sociologists and ecologists. In digging into source material they did not overlook even the industrialist and the businessman, for those chaps, or rather the successful among them, got hep to regional differences ahead of the professors. "Even though the tightly fitting, hard bowler (derby to you, buddy), and the wide-brimmed, high-crowned, soft felt sombrero of the cowboy may both be manufactured in Philadelphia and although the trade-mark may be the same, they are worn in different portions of the Nation and by different types of persons. Even though style and design throughout the Nation bear the stamp of Hollywood and New York, the materials in which they are executed will range from silks and woolens in one area of the Nation to cotton and linen in another." From the Association of National Advertisers comes the information that "no amount of high-pressure selling can materially change the buying standard of New England."

Whatever his sales resistance in other spheres, culturally the Midwesterner looks askance at change. They would "whip the changer into line with social ostracism. Radicals are feared and unwelcomed in the community. They are 'ferriners' and outside agitators . . . Any talk of a new social order is at once considered un-American. Try to bust Main Street and Main Street will bust you."

Each region, of course, covers a multitude of differences within itself. As the authors remark of the South, "it's a long way from Erskine Caldwell's 'Tobacco Road' to Stephen Vincent Benet's 'John Brown's Body.'" Those transplanted New Yorkers from other regions who fancy that most reformers and crackpots are bred back home may be surprised to hear that in the Northeast "are more than two-thirds of the great national agencies and organizations looking toward the reform and relief of the Nation's ills."

"Here are the great centers of art, literature, drama, theater. Here are the cradles of the intelligentsia of the new megapolitan provincials. Here, strangely enough, are the cradles of reform and radicalism and the bulwarks of conservatism," including an overwhelming majority of those "60 families" who are supposed to have outsmarted the rest of us. The authors found the South to have retained more early "Americanisms" than any other region, these including a small foreign population, the largest ratio of Protestants in religion, and an agrarian culture. The Northeast is adjudged the least "regional" of all the regions. Like the Far West it is so fabricated of people from the other regions that it is a melting pot of Americans as well as of Europeans.

• • • • •

WELL, it's a great country, this United States of ours. The more I see of it, the more I read of it in such sound studies as "American Regionalism," the more I'm convinced that in diversity there is strength.

Text Of Hull's Note To Mexico

Excellency:

During recent years the Government of the United States has upon repeated occasions made representations to the government of Mexico with regard to the continuing expropriation by your excellency's government of agrarian properties owned by American citizens, without adequate, effective and prompt compensation being made therefor.

In extenuation of such action, the Mexican government both in its official correspondence and in its public pronouncements has adverted to the fact that it is earnestly endeavoring to carry forward a program for the social betterment of the masses of its people.

The purposes of this program, however desirable they may be, are entirely unrelated to and apart from the real issue under discussion between our two governments. The issue is not whether Mexico should pursue social and economic policies designed to improve the standard of living of its people. The issue is whether in pursuing them the property of American nationals may be taken by the Mexican government without making prompt payment of just compensation to the owner in accordance with the universally recognized rules of law and equity.

My Government has frequently asserted the right of all countries freely to determine their own social, agrarian and industrial problems. This right includes the sovereign right of any government to expropriate private property within its borders in furtherance of public purposes. The Government of the United States has itself been very actively pursuing a program of social betterment. For example it has undertaken to improve the share of the farmer in the national income, to provide better housing, the wider use of electric power at reasonable rates, and security against old age and unemployment, to expand foreign trade through reduction of trade barriers, to prevent exploitation of labor through excessive hours and inadequate pay, to protect debtors from oppression, to curb monopolies; in short it is carrying out the most far-reaching program for the improvement of the general standard of living that this country has ever seen. Under this program it has expropriated from foreigners as well as its own citizens properties of various kinds, such as submarginal and eroded lands to be retired from farming, slums to be cleared for housing projects, land for power dams, lands containing resources to be preserved for government use. In each and every case the Government of the United States has scrupulously observed the universally recognized principle of compensation and has reimbursed promptly and in cash the owners of the properties that have been expropriated.

Since the right of compensation is unquestioned under international law, it cannot be conceived that insistance on it by this Government should impair in any way the warm friendship which exists between the Government of Mexico and our own, and between the people of Mexico and our own. This is particularly true because we have, in fact, pursued a constantly expanding program of financial, economic and normal co-operation. We have been mutually helpful to each other, and this Government is most desirous, in keeping with the good neighbor policy which it has been carrying forward during the last five years, to continue to co-operate with the Mexican Government in every mutually desirable and advantageous way.

One of the greatest services we can render is to pursue, and to urge others to pursue, a policy of fair dealing and fair play based on law and justice. Just as within our own borders we strive to prevent exploitation of debtors by powerful creditors and to protect the common man in making an honest living, so we are justified in accordance with recognized international law in striving to prevent unfair or oppressive treatment of our own people in other countries. It is the experience of this hemisphere, and this Government is convinced, that only by these means can the conditions of the peoples in all countries be soundly and permanently improved. Certainly the destruction of underlying principles of law and equity does not conduce to such improvement.

In its negotiations with the Mexican government for compensation for the lands of American citizens that have been expropriated, my Government has consistently maintained the principle of compensation. That it has been no party to an unjust or unreasonable use of the doctrine is demonstrated by the following record:

Agrarian expropriations began in Mexico in 1915. Up to August 30, 1927, 161 moderate-sized properties of American citizens had been taken. The claims arising therefrom were after much discussion referred to the General Claims Commission established by agreement between the two governments. It is appropriate to point out, however, that, as yet, and for whatever the reasons may be, not a single claim has been adjusted and none has been paid. The owners of these properties notwithstanding the repeated requests of this Government for settlement, lost their property, its use and proceeds, from 11 years to more than 20 years ago, and are still seeking redress.

Subsequent to 1927, additional properties, chiefly farms of a moderate size, with a value claimed by their owners of $10,132,388, have been expropriated by the Mexican government. This figure does not include the large land grants frequently mentioned in the press. It refers to the moderate-sized holdings which rendered only a modest living. None of them as yet has been paid for. Considering that expropriation was the free act of the Mexican government and the liability was voluntarily incurred by it, certainly on the basis of the record above stated, the United States Government cannot be accused of being unreasonable or impatient.

This latter group of cases has been in the past few years the subject of frequent representations by my Government. On March 27 of this year, it inquired of your government what specific action with respect to payment was contemplated. On April 19 the Mexican government responded, expressing its willingness to make a small monthly payment as settlement for a small number of agrarian claims of American nationals in one locality in Mexico. In response to an inquiry for further information you reiterated to this department, on May 26 last, substantially what the government of Mexico had already stated. On June 29 a detailed communication was addressed to you, setting forth the amount of the claims advanced for compensation to American nationals for agrarian properties expropriated, containing suggestions as to how the value of these properties might be determined in a manner satisfactory to both governments, and requesting that payments be commenced while the determination of value was being reached. On July 15 your excellency sent a further communication to this government in which no deference whatever was made to the suggestions advanced as to the method of determining the amounts owing for compensation, offering no indication that the government of Mexico is prepared to make payments while the amount of the value of the properties expropriated is being determined, and stating that the government of Mexico "has not contemplated covering entirely, during the present presidential term, the amount of the properties expropriated; much less has it undertaken, nor can it undertake, to proceed in such manner." In result, the American owners whose properties have been taken are left not only without present payment, but without assurance that payment will be made within any forseeable time.

The taking of property without compensation is not expropriation. It is confiscation. It is no less confiscation because there may be an expressed intent to pay at some time in the future.

If it were permissible for a government to take the private property of the citizens of other countries and pay for it as and when, in the judgment of that government, its economic circumstances and its local legislation may perhaps permit, the safeguards which the constitutions of most countries and established international law have sought to provide would be illusory. Governments would be free to take property far beyond their ability or willingness to pay, and the owners thereof would be without recourse. We cannot question the right of a foreign government to treat its own nationals in this fashion if it so desires. This is a matter of domestic concern. But we cannot admit that a foreign government may take the property of American nationals in disregard of the rule of compensation under international law. Nor can we admit that any government unilaterally and through its municipal legislation can, as in this instant case, nullify this universally accepted principle of international law, based as it is on reason, equity and justice.

The representations which this Government has made to the Government of Mexico have been undertaken with entire friendliness and good will, and the Mexican government has recognized that fact. We are entirely sympathetic to the desires of the Mexican government for the social betterment of its people. We cannot accept the idea, however, that these plans can be carried forward at the expense of our citizens, any more than we would feel justified in carrying forward our plans for our own social betterment at the expense of citizens of Mexico.

The good neighbor policy can only be based on mutual respect by both governments of the rights of each and of the rights of the citizens of each. President Roosevelt could not have spoken more truly than when he recently stated that the good neighbor policy is

A policy which can never be merely unilateral. In stressing it the American republics appreciate, I am confident, that it is bilateral and multilateral, and that the fair dealing which it implies must be reciprocated.

The government of Mexico, from the standpoint of the long-run and healthy progress of the Mexican people, should be just as vitally interested in maintaining the integrity of the good neighbor policy as any other country. The surest way of breaking up the good neighbor policy would be to allow the impression that it permits the disregard of the just rights of the nationals of one country owning property in another country. In company with the citizens of the other American republics, citizens of the United States own properties not only in Mexico but in practically all countries. The same may be said of the citizens of the great majority of the nations of the world.

The whole structure of friendly intercourse, of international trade and commerce, and many other vital and mutually desirable relations between nations indispensable to their progress rest upon the single and hitherto solid foundation of respect on the part of governments and of peoples for each other's rights under international justice. The right of prompt and just compensation for expropriated property is a part of this structure. It is a principle to which the Government of the United States and most governments of the world have emphatically subscribed and which they have practiced and which must be maintained. It is not a principle which freezes the status quo and denies change in property rights but a principle that permits any country to expropriate private property within its borders in furtherance of public purposes. It enables orderly change without violating the legitimately acquired interests of citizens of other countries.

The government of Mexico has professed its support of this principle of law. It is the considered judgment, however, of the Government of the United States that the government of Mexico has not complied therewith in the case of several hundred separate farm or agrarian properties taken from American citizens. This judgment is apparently not admitted by your government. The Government of the United States therefore proposes that there be submitted to arbitration the question whether there has been compliance by the government of Mexico with the rule of compensation as prescribed by international law in the case of the American citizens whose farms and agrarian properties in Mexico have been expropriated by the Mexican government since August 30, 1927, and if not, the amount of, and terms under which, compensation should be made by the government of Mexico. My Government proposes that this arbitration be carried out pursuant to the provisions of the General Treaty of Arbitration signed at Washington January 5, 1929, to which both our countries are parties.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

Turns With A Bookworm

TO START on an optimistic note, the second All Nations Prize Novel Competition is now open, and will be till the first of next January, which seems an awful long way off, but it will be here quick enough if you're trying to finish a novel . . . The competition is sponsored by Farrar & Rinehart, Pinker & Morrison, the Literary Guild, and leading publishers of England, France, Germany, Hungary, Sweden, Poland, Italy, Holland, Czechoslovakia; the prize money will amount to something over $15,000 altogether . . . Each country will pick its own best bet, then an international committee, composed of Frank Swinnerton, Gaston Rageot and John Beecroft, will choose from the national entries . . . The American judges will be John Beecroft, Hervey Allen and T. S. Stribling . . . And if the American choice doesn't get the international verdict, Farrar & Rinehart will give it an independent prize of $1,000 just the same.

• • • •

WE SHOULD GUESS, doubtless completely wrong, that the longest manuscript, with the most action, would have the best chance—style a remotely secondary consideration . . . Some time ago Mr. Stribling wrote a piece which seemed to indicate—at least, that's how we understood it—that he thought style and rhetoric were synonymous . . . But we don't want to reopen the topic on a warm day . . . Manuscripts should be sent to Farrar & Rinehart. . . .

• • • •

WHAT THEY ARE in for may be realized from a report on the last Little, Brown prize novel competition; one of the competitors figured it from the number of manuscripts entered . . . He assumed 125,000 words a manuscript, which may be a little more than the average, but not enough to worry about . . . And he also assumed 5,000 words of composition for each eight hours . . . Would it were so . . . Eight words of composition for each 5,000 hours would be more like it . . . But we'll quote the data as submitted, and split the difference afterward.

Home Vacation Is Fine Rest for Busy Housewife

Make Children Wear Only Simple Dresses; Cook One-Dish Meals.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SOMETIMES we think that it isn't the actual physical energy spent in caring for a home and family that gives a lady a case of self-pity. It's the inevitability of it all. With steady implacable persistence, families and homes have a way of going on—summer, winter, spring and fall, come rain or shine, heat or bitter cold. So it's no wonder we get the blues about the threat of monotany.

The Best Vacation.

There may not be a holiday in store for you this summer, but there should be a change in the tempo of your life. And a change we're told is the finest vacation of all. Since you can't change your surrondings, it might be a good idea to change your way of living a little.

Look over your daily lists of things to do and see where you can eliminate here and there. If ironing little Sally's frocks takes a good bit of your time and energy, resolve that Sally shall wear the simplest types of dresses during your "vacation"—little seersuckers and such that require little pressing and no fancy work. If the family is addicted to big, hearty meals, go on strike (a nice comfortable "sit-down" strike) for the summer months and specialize in one-dish meals that can be prepared in the morning and popped into the oven and practically forgotten—and have at least one picnic supper a week when all members of the family pitch in and make their own and clean up afterward as well.

Before Heat of Day.

Then for painless summer housekeeping resolve to get up very early each morning, before the heat of the day has had a chance to set in, and get all your heaviest tasks performed then. Then, for the rest of the day, take it easy, remembering that this your vacation.

Investigate new play-equipment for back-yard "camping out" at home. And plan your eatings outdoors with efficiency, getting large platters and a big coffee pot or iced tea pitcher to save treks back and forth to the kitchen. If children form a major part of your summer activities, do a thorough job of organizing their summer, too—so that idle hands won't find work for that old man with the forked tail. Start a gardening project for a younger group, or turn over a part of the back yard for camp with a canvas tub for dips, swings and see-saws and the like. If there are a number of children in the neighborhood, divide the job of planning their activities with other mothers, so that, although you may be busy as all get out for one or two days a week, you will have time off when other mothers take over their weekly stint.

You can have a real "vacation" at home if you make a point about it.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Couple in Love Quarrel Constantly in Talking of Future Plans. Girl Asks—Why Is It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've been going with a boy for almost three years. During that time we've seen each other at least four times a week. Neither of us has dated anyone else during that time, although occasionally we have gone out with another couple or two. While he has not proposed, we have talked about the future many times, and I know he loves me and wants to marry me.

• • • •

However, his father is dead and he is more or less tied to his mother's apron strings, being an only child. He is often late to his date with me, and the excuse is, usually, that he had to take a visiting relative home, or he had to water the lawn, etc. He never has any suggestions about where we shall go or what we shall do. We quarreled about this last night, because after the usual hemming and hawing, he said: "Well, let's go to a show and get it over with."

• • • •

When (if) we marry, we will have his mother with us, because he says he can't support two households, and besides, he wouldn't feel right leaving his mother all alone. I opposed the suggestion at first, because I feel a young couple can be happier by themselves, but I gave in when he argued he couldn't support two households. (Our combined salaries amount to more than $4,000). I am alone in Washington, and I am willing to give up seeing my people—except for annual vacations—for the rest of my life to be with him; yet he doesn't feel it is right to leave his mother alone, even though he would be living in the same city and visits would be a matter of a few minutes' ride.

• • • •

I can't seem to make friends with his mother, perhaps because he has told me she doesn't want him to marry, especially a person of my religious faith, and because she does petty things that irritate me. For instance, when he is out of earshot, she calls me "Miss So-and-So"; but when he is around she calls me by my first name. Lately he has brought up the question of, "What would you do if such-and-such happened?" because I had stated very emphatically that if we married I would have to be considered before his mother, and he usually comes back with, "But suppose I agree with her?" I replied that what I did would depend on how important the disagreement was.

• • • •

I feel that we are getting no place fast by quarreling about things that might never come between us. I want to cross bridges when I come to them, and not worry about how I will cross a bridge when I come to a bridge, if I come to a bridge. All these petty quarrels seem so senseless afterward, but when they are happening they seem quite important. Perhaps you can tell me what's wrong with us.

H. H.

Mother-Dominated Man.

DEAR H. H.: Unless you love this young man so utterly that Hades, with him, would seem preferable to Heaven, without him, I advise you to break off the relationship at once and begin to look around for a more compatible, stimulating and matrimonially more eligible man. Any youth who is so tied to his mother's apron strings that her personality casts an insistent and chilling shadow over his very courtship, isn't really eligible for matrimony, in the sense of being psychically and socially free to marry. The girl who marries so mother-dominated a man is marrying a sort of two-headed psychic entity. Her relationship with her husband will be just about as devoid of spiritual privacy as it would be if she married one of a pair of Siamese twins, so-called.

• • • •

Mother (or mother-in-law) would be present in the flesh as much as she could possibly contrive; and when she was disbarred from tangible and visible participation in the marriage, she would be there in the spirit, dominating her son's behavior by remote emotional control. A bride hasn't a ghost of a chance of discovering or developing a normal pattern of married happiness in such an arrangement. At best, no matter how deeply she loves her husband, she is committing herself to a lifelong compromise with her hopes and plans and feelings. She is forswearing the chance of playing a normal mother's role in the life of her children, supposing she has any; for this type of mother-in-law is avid in her interference concerning the rearing of grandchildren.

• • • •

Nothing the daughter-in-law of such a woman could ever do would win her complete approval. She is the grudging, suspicious enemy of any other woman who dares to pose as the bringer of happiness or life completion to her son. She is content to make her son her way of life; and she wills that he be content with his mother as his way of life. Anyone else is a brash interloper, to be steam-rollered into insignificance, or shunted out of their joint lives, as quickly as possible.

• • • •

Everything you have told about the youth's attitude toward his mother, versus his attitude toward you; and everything you have told about her attitude toward you, both in and out of his presence, tells—to discerning eyes and ears—a plain story of an abnormal mother-and-son relationship—abnormal in the sense that the mother has never required of her son that he grow up emotionally and stand on his own feet as an autonomous personality; that she has, on the contrary, reared him in such a way as to keep him dependent upon her, as well as inordinately sensitive and responsive to her wishes and preferences, in matters both large and small; and that she instinctively resorts to stealthy strategy (easily readable by women's eyes, but lost on men's) in undermining any budding love relationship that might weaken her hold on him.

• • • •

Thus she pin-pricks you; creates unfriendliness, in order to show you at a disadvantage either now or on some future day when your resentment may flare openly. She interferes with his plans to meet you, as a means of creating a rift in the relationship; and ever so gently and tactfully explains to him the unsuitability of this particular match. If he is busy crossing bridges before he comes to them, it is probably because his mother has sown the seed of such calculation in his mind, by implication and casual suggestion.

• • • •

It is my opinion that you quarrel with this boy because, quite unawarely, you are fighting his mother's influence over him; and that he quarrels with you because, unconsciously, he is reflecting her quarrel with you. He is, in a sense, her creature; a puppet to which she holds the strings. She has failed to deliver him over to life as a person in his own right, and it is doubtful if he ever effects the transfer on his own power at this late date. Remaking of character is a long and painfully tedious process, which few have the stamina to undertake and execute, even when they recognize the necessity for so doing.

Fount of Youth Is in Nutrition Science Reveals

Liberal Amounts of Fresh Fruits, Vegetables, Milk and Eggs Urged.

By Ida Jean Kain.

OLD Ponce de Leon should have stayed home and watched his diet instead of traipsing over the world looking for the fabled fountain of youth . . . At least, that's what the latest developments in the science of nutrition would seem to indicate.

If this old Spanish adventurer had been up on the science of nutrition, he would have made sure that his three meals a day contained the important protective foods. According to experiments by Dr. Henry C. Sherman, of Columbia Universary, our best chance of staying young longer—he calls it "extending the prime of life"—is in taking a diet that is optional rather than one that is merely adequate in these foods.

The net results of the experiments were the extension of both the prime of life to a ripe old age unless we could expect to enjoy living, and the most important discovery in connection with the optimal diet is its potentiality for prolonging youth. To live to be 75 or 80 and to look and feel no older than we could normally expect at 25 . . . that is a real gift of longevity, and one that would have appealed strongly to Ponce de Leon.

The Sherman experiments were made with the aid of little white rats, which have a nutritional chemistry very similar in every respect to that of human beings, with a life cycle 30 times as fast. The results obtained in a short time with these little rodents would take centuries if the principles of the experiments were applied to human beings. It takes so many years for the ill effects of a poor diet to show up in the human being that we are sometimes slow to realize the importance of good nutrition. For example, a child on a nutritionally poor diet may not show the ill effects for four years.

At the Columbia laboratories, one group of the white rats was placed on the average diet, which is considered adequate, and a second group was given a diet optimum in the protective elements. In the superior diet there was an increase in calcium, twice as much protein and four times as much vitamin A and vitamin G.

It is easy to apply the findings of these experiments to your own diet. You can bring your diet to optimum by using more liberal amounts of fresh fruits and vegetables, milk, eggs, cheese and whole grain. Since each of these foods contains more than one of the protective elements, the list is fairly slim. Once you realize the importance of these protective foods you will make them the foundation of your daily diet.

Normally, we have a life expectancy of 70 years and the onset of senility becomes apparent around the age of 65. On the optimal diet, however, you may expect to live to be 77 years old and to defer the onset of senility to 75—or even to 80!

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 21.

EVEN THOUGH I see very little of it, I love the night sky. No one is fonder of "the spacious firmament on high," as the old hymn says, with its lovely but mysterious stars. But no one who has never spent a summer on Manhattan Island can realize how low and oppressive the sky can be. If you could find the time and strength to wander through the rackety and smelly area called Times Square on one of these July nights, you would find it easy to reach right up and knock the Big Dipper over the Palisades and into Darkest Jersey. It bears down.

ALICE HUGHES.

As a charter member of the Gotham Greeters' and Glad-Handers' Sodality no one is more eager to welcome you to our happy little hamlet than I. Yet there is something so depressing and debilitating about our theater, movie, auction, hot dog and shooting gallery district in midsummer that even I could wish you to put off your visit until October 15, say. Once in awhile the spouse and I, after three hours in a cool movie arena, walk through the bright-light district and reach home almost on the brink of a suicidal mania. For its sidewalks are jammed with little girls in prints and little boys in fancy galluses whose young faces wear the nervous, harassed and wearied looks that are too frequently a symptom of a New York summer. The very taxi horns have an even nastier sound. Pedestrians do not leap for safety to the Broadway curb—they crawl on hands and knees. To remodel the old gag, when a cop chases a burglar, these nights, they both walk. It takes the zip from the legs, the dander from the soul. But, oh, come on ahead if this is vacation time! It's the humidity!

Take my spouse. He's an expert on tropical heat. He worked five years in the City of Washington. But he swears that the lovely and placid Capital is a wind-tossed mountain peak compared to this town. This is not a warning, dearies—only a lament. Even so, our age has produced air-conditioning—even here.

GIRL ABOUT OWN—Seven hundred high school boys and girls and I tried to attend the second wedding of Frances Langford and Charles Locher, or Jon Hall, as we and Sam Goldwyn call him, at our famous and delightful Little Church Round the Corner. The kids won. These two had been married before, as you know, but they thought they'd do it again, and made all the papers. Nothing like Young Love—especially when all the cameramen and autograph-termites turn up. Any town bidding loudly for the third marriage of this Cupid-struck duo?

• • • •

Do you remember my mentioning a Georgian "princess" here named Ketto Mikeladze, a gorgeous black-haired, pale-faced woman who has worked hard for a living here these many years? Anyhow, in her past was a Swedish husband, and a result was a lovely daughter named Sigrid Lassen, as fair as her mamma is dark, and doozy with stage hopes. Now Sigrid, a beauty, has married a young actor named Bertrand Michel.

• • • •

A little boy named Daniel Barney, all of 13, stunned our reporters by turning out to be a hat designer, and a cute creator for a mere babe. But the press got a little too smart with Dan, who now has a scholarship in a local school of design, and he smacked back as best he could. "I'm no sissy," snapped Dan'l. "I play football." Good kid, but you are in jeopardy, none the less!

Pour into a mold and chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce. Top with more dressing.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Pocketbook Lament.

If someone would only invent me a bag in which I could find things—
Without this eternal rummaging and drawing out my most intimate chattels
To exhibit to strangers.
I have pulled out cordons of safety pins and boxes of medicine,
Emergency darning thread, hair nets, unpaid bills, and tin curlers,
The keys to my trunk, my suitcase, my apartment, my strong box,
my diary,
When I was merely hunting a dollar.

• • • •

I have kept angry crowds waiting at the doors of street cars and buses
While I handed conductors a varied assortment of treasures
In lieu of my pass.
I have given them my calling card, my little celluloid calendar,
My stamp book, my pass to a night club, my library ticket,
And mementos from people who were selling insurance, corsets and vacuum cleaners,
Also invitations to church ice cream socials.

• • • •

I have never been able—for all the cosmetics with which I'm provided—
To find the right one at the approach of a handsome male stranger,
Or a visitor from home.
When I reach for my compact, I draw out my box of aspirin, my cigarettes, my matches;
When I grab for my lipstick, I come up with a tube of hand cream or collapsible shoe brush,
A handful of clips, a nail file, eyebrow pencil, perfume flacon,
Or a fountain pen that is leaking.

• • • •

I have never yet encountered a purse in which nickels and dimes
Did not drop to the bottom and doggedly hide out of sight
While bellboys waited.
I have never seen one in which $5 bills did not tumble into magnificent view,
When I was hunting change for a beggar; or one in which a blank piece of paper
Was ever available to take down the address and the telephone number
Of a friend who insisted you call her.

• • • •

I have just about decided that the only intelligent solution
Of this pressing feminine problem is a bag scientifically designed,
With a card index system.
Then on boarding a street car I could say grandly to my secretary,
"Please look under 'Ps' in my handbag and give the conductor my pass,"
Or in a store, "Look under 'C' for that coupon that gives me that discount on soap;
"It's filed next to my comb and my compact."

Flower Embroidery.

Paris (U.P.).—Gay flowers are embroidered in silk down each front side of a navy cotton blouse worn atop loose slacks of the same navy cotton material. It's Lucien Lelong's idea. Bruyere is fond of the beige and black combination and so he embroiders a beige motif on the front of a black jersey blouse worn with a beige wool jacket and skirt. On a beige silk dress he embroiders a black design at each side of the high neck fastening. A narrow black grosgrain ribbon ties at the waist for a belt.

'Cocktail Frillies' Just Bathing Suits To Wear at Bars

Paris (U.P.).—Have you a 'cocktail frillie" in your wardrobe? They were introduced by Jacques Heim in his summer collection, and they're really glorified bathing suits that were never meant to get near any kind of water.

At the beach cafe or bar, when practical shorts seem a little tame and when a whole dress seems entirely too formal, the "frillie" makes the compromise. Here's an example: a skin-tight white surah silk bathing suit with one ruffle around its hem and two ruffles around the legs of the shorts which barely peep out from under the bathing suit skirt. Still more ruffles edge the low V neck and the puff sleeves.

Another "frillie" brings grandmother's beach suit up to date. It is a bloomer suit made of a gay silk print. A fully gathered blouse tops the abbreviated bloomers and short puffed sleeves add a modest, alluring note.

Sweet, Cold Sandwiches Win Prizes

Martha Ryan's Recipe, With Claret and Sugar, Gets First Award.

Breadless and Surrealist Ideas Examples of Ingenuity.

By The Post Food Editor.

SANDWICH entries in The Post's recipe contest this week showed a wide range of imagination. Many suggestions were so original that much private experimenting was necessary on the part of the Food Editor. Entries were found to be strikingly new in inspiration as well as being highly practical for summer menu planning. Fifteen contestants were awarded honorable mention.

Recipes ran from fried and baked main dish sandwiches to demure little rolled tea blocks and flowers. There was a problem of duplication in the case of Sandwich Loaf, "Dream" and crab meat recipes, which made awarding of the prizes difficult.

Ingenuity Shown.

Many ideas were ingenious, as in the recipes combining grapenuts with cream cheese, and popcorn and nuts with mashed potatoes. It was interesting to find one of this department's favorite trimming ideas being utilized—that of tying rolled sandwiches with green pepper or Bermuda onion rings. Another one of our favored theories on sandwich-making was entered—that of soaking bread in milk, dipping it in egg and frying it with its tempting meat mixture as you would a slice of French toast.

Mrs. Jeanne Hedrick, of Arlington, Va., was thoughtful enough to enter not only her favorite sandwich recipes but several helpful hints about preparation as well. The following excerpt may assist other sandwich makers:

"If butter is used cream the shortening and spread bread before cutting from loaf.

"Sandwiches should be shaped before spreading to prevent waste of butter.

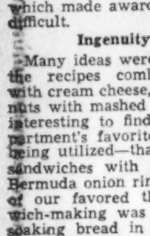
"Preferably day-old bread cuts are favorable.

"Sandwiches which are prepared several hours before serving time may be kept fresh and moist by wrapping in a napkin wrung dry as possible out of hot water, and keeping in a cool place. Waxed paper is often used for same purpose."

Chilled Recipes Popular.

A notable feature of the sandwich contest was the number of entries specifying refrigerative methods for sandwich preparation. This indicates a trend worth watching in this food of ancient origin. The Post Food Editor has received several requests for additional peach contest recipes from last week. If summer sandwich hints, other than these published, are desired, telephone The Post Food Editor for suggestions.

For Teas and Parties.



MISS M. RYAN.

Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, has been awarded first prize of $3.00. Her entry is outstandingly different, as she prescribes sweet sandwiches. The idea is a novel one, and Washington hostesses will want to serve these cool little sweets at midsummer teas and parties.

Claret Jelly Sandwiches.

1 box gelatin (2 oz.)
1 cup hot water
1 cup cold water
1 cup sugar
1½ cups claret
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup whipping cream
½ cup English walnuts and almonds
1 sponge cake, large

Soak the gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot. Add sugar and strain. When cold, add claret and lemon juice. Mold in sheets ⅜ inch deep in a wet pan. Slice nuts very thin and stir into stiffly whipped cream. From thin slice of sponge cake cut fancy shapes. With the same cutters stamp out jelly shapes. Spread cakes with cream and nuts and cover with jelly shapes.

The 'One Hot Dish.'

Second prize has been captured by Mrs. F. D. Spencer, 2918 Fourteenth street northwest. She writes that her newly devised baked sandwich is "both delicious and attractive," and with her combination of ingredients there is little room for doubt. This recipe is an ideal one for that hot dish necessary in even summer diets.

MRS. SPENCER.

Seasonable Baked Sandwich.

1 loaf of unsliced white bread
1 pound of ground meat
1 can mushroom soup
3 medium sized tomatoes
3 medium sized onions
1 teaspoon sage poultry seasoning
2 teaspoons bacon drippings
Salt and pepper to taste

Picnic Suggestion.

DR. E. ALLEN.

Edith L. Allen, 1020 Connecticut avenue northwest, wins a $1 award for her picnic suggestion. This capable Ph. D. remarks that she takes her own sandwich formula to picnics "where bread and roll sandwiches are apt to be too numerous," and that she "never has leftovers to take home." Her basic idea is a sensible one, and offers wide variety to others wishing to try this plan.

Breadless Sandwich.

Use assorted cold meats sliced thin and firm ripe tomatoes which are suited to make round sandwiches. Add large Spanish onion and lettuce, peppers (green and red); cucumber, celery, etc. Slice the tomato and onion thin, and chop up the other vegetables; mix them with salad dressing to taste. On a slice of meat put a slice of tomato, place the mixed vegetables on this and cover with a slice of onion and a slice of meat.

Sweet and Sour Effect.

Trim crusts from bread and cut loaf into four slices length wise, which will fit easily into a loaf pan. Brown the meat in the hot fat, add salt, pepper, sage seasoning and enough soup to moisten—about ¾ cup. Place a slice of bread in the pan, cover with 1-3 of the meat mixture. On this, place one of the onions, sliced thin, then one of the tomatoes, sliced thin. Repeat for the second and third slices of bread. Top with the fourth slice. Add a bit of the mushroom soup, if it seems too dry. Place in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 35 or 40 minutes. Turn out on a platter, garnish with parsley and radish roses. Thicken the remaining soup with a bit of flour and serve as gravy.

MISS G. SIEGEL.

Miss Gertrude Siegel, 2140 F street northwest receives $1 for her colorful entry. Her cottage carrot spread produces something of a sweet and sour effect which awakens a welcome response for summer palates. Cottage cheese, nuts and fresh vegetables supply high nutritive value in this healthful recipe.

Cottage Carrot Spread.

1 cup cottage cheese
½ cup shredded carrot
¼ cup chopped sweet pickle
½ cup flinely diced celery
½ cup chopped walnut meats
½ teaspoon salt
Dash cayenne
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup mayonnaise

Combine all ingredients. Spread generously on well-buttered brown or white bread. Sufficient filling for 12 large sandwiches.

Artistic Creation.

Mrs. F. W. Baumann, 175 V street northeast also receives $1.00 for her picturesque sandwich idea. Mrs. Baumann has entered many enticing recipes both in this week's contest and in the past. Of her numerous contributions, her Cornucopia Sandwich is particularly delicious and undeniably beautiful. It resembles a surrealist's dream of attractive summertime eating.

MRS. BAUMANN.

Surrealist Sandwich.

Cut thin slices of buttered bread into half circles. Roll like a cornucopia, sealing edge with butter. Beat cream cheese and milk until light, mix in chopped raisins and nuts. Fill cornucopia and chill.

Fruits Are Often The Best Dessert

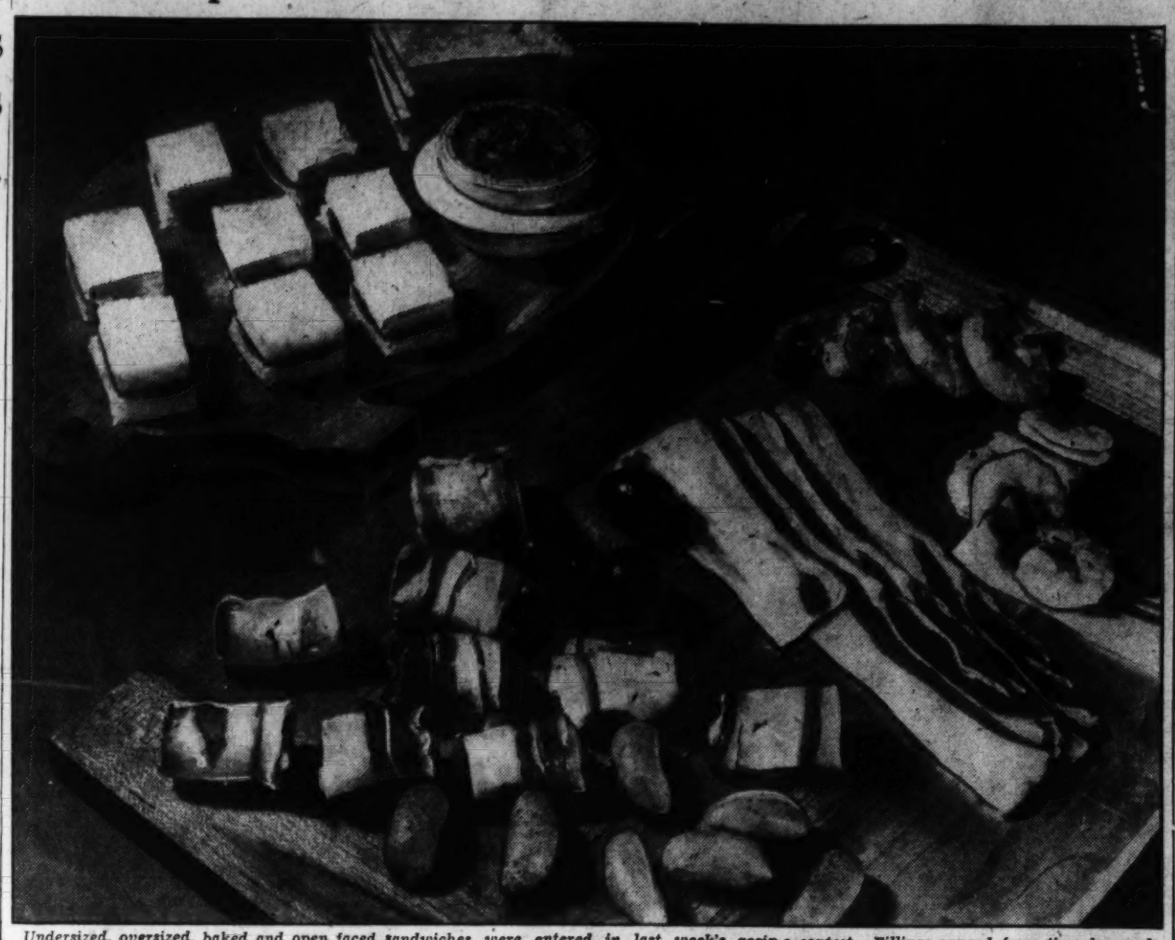
Commercially prepared salad dressings are as a rule notable for distinctive spicing. Sometimes, however, a salad combination calls for greater sharpness in the dressing than the ready-made dressing possesses, and sometimes the ready-made dressing needs to be thinned for a particular salad. For such occasions it is well to have on hand a jar of spiced vinegar which is readily made at home in quantity and will keep indefinitely.

Spiced Vinegar.

1 quart good cider vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 bay leaf
¼ ounce each whole cloves, blades of mace, whole allspice, whole pepper, celery seed and mustard seed.

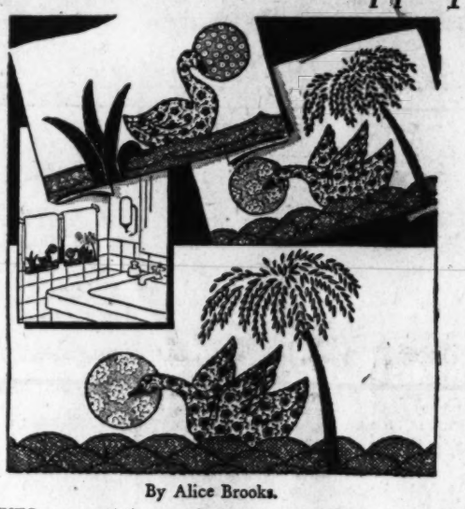
Put all these ingredients in a large jar with a tight-fitting cover. Let stand for two weeks, then strain out the spices. The vinegar can be used in making home-prepared salad dressings.

Lilliputian and Breadless Sandwiches Win Awards



Undersized, oversized, baked and open faced sandwiches were entered in last week's recipe contest. Fillings ranged from time honored chicken on whole wheat to an unusual combination of grapenuts and cheese. Picnic and outdoor eating time often creates amusing sandwich ideas, and five Washington women have profited by their experiences. The cash award recipes appear on this page.

Colorful Bits From Scrap Bag Make Summer Swan Applique



By Alice Brooks.

GET INTO an artistic mood! There are colorful bits to be selected from your scrap bag for this fascinating swan applique. The patches are easy to cut and apply to towels, pillow cases or a scarf. Finish with a bit of simple stitchery. Pattern 150 contains a transfer pattern of 2 motifs 6x15 inches; 2 motifs 4½x15 inches and patterns for applique patches; materials required; color schemes; illustrations of stitches.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

The Runners Up

Mrs. F. E. Malchow, 4101 Twenty-fifth street, North Arlington, Va., popcorn sandwich.

Ruth S. Cunningham, 1712 Sixteenth street northwest, "Sunday night filler-upper."

Mrs. Prentiss D. Sale, jr., 1428 Whittier street northwest, open-faced sandwich.

Mrs. C. B. McCallum, 4410 Fourteenth street northwest, egg yolk sandwiches and sardine sandwiches.

Doris Abbott, Agricultural Engineering Department, hot Spanish sandwich.

Mrs. Paul Kringel, 2601 North Franklin road, Arlington, Va., rolled sandwiches.

Mrs. Albert Day, Auburn avenue, Bethesda, Md., pyramid sandwiches.

Miss Rebecca Merriam, 5009 Fourteenth street northwest, sandwich loaf.

Mrs. E. S. Morgan, 503 Twenty-fourth street northeast, Kingman Park sandwiches.

Dorothy E. Hayford, Haymarket, Va., Brazilian sandwiches.

Mrs. Arthur Rhoads, 520 Elm street, Frederick, Md., open-faced flower sandwiches.

Miss Rebecca Gordon, 1331 Maryland avenue northeast, cheese crumpets.

Mrs. Mary Mathews, Rehoboth Beach, Del., luncheon sandwich loaf.

Mrs. William F. Guffey, jr., 3010 Wisconsin avenue northwest, toasted dried beef sandwiches.

Mrs. J. B. Campbell, 713 Nineteenth street northwest, olive-pickle-nut sandwich.

Mrs. Dorothy Gordon, 1513 Upshur street northwest, grape-nut cheese sandwiches.

Creole Kidney.

Cut 6 slices bacon into small pieces and brown. Cut kidney into half-inch slices. Dredge these with flour and brown in bacon fat. Add 2 small onions and 1 green pepper, both finely chopped. Stir until meat is well browned. Add 1 cup tomato juice, salt and papper. Cover closely and simmer until done, about half an hour. Mix 1 tablespoon flour to a paste with cold water. Add slowly to creole mixture, stirring to prevent lumping.

Apple Ginger Cake.

Two large sour apples, pared and grated, plus the juice and rind of 1 lemon, and 1 cup of sugar, cooked 5 minutes with constant stirring make a delicious filling for a two-layer spice of ginger cake. Cool the filling before spreading. Serve the cake immediately after the filling is placed between the layers.

Lemon Takes Important Role In Preserving

Cloying Sweetness of Marmalade Is Overcome by Little Juice.

THIS is the time of year when housewives swap recipes for jams, jellies and preserves. Washington kitchens now are fragrant with the aroma of cooking fruit, and local cupboards exhibit shining rows of well-filled jars. The abundance of fruit and vegetables on the market has made preserving a particularly popular pursuit this summer.

Here are a few suggestions for housewives who are observing the preserving season:

The cloying sweetness of preserves and marmalades is overcome by adding one tablespoon of lemon juice to each cup of fruit about two minutes before removing from heat.

With conserves, one lemon sliced thin is added to each pint of fruit. This may be done with pear, peach, apricot, pineapple or tomato conserves.

Experts recommend the use of one tablespoon lemon juice and one teaspoon salt to each pint jar to increase the certainty of success in canning such vegetables as corn, artichokes, peas, beans, asparagus and greens.

When preparing quince, pumpkin or ginger chips, allow one-half cup lemon juice for every pound of sugar used.

Here are some suggested recipes:

Baked Orange and Peach Jam.

(Yields about 2 pints.)

This is a jam that's baked! No standing over a hot range to make this. The oven makes this delicious summer jam, while the mistress of the house attends to other duties.

2 medium oranges
1 lemon
1 dozen fresh peaches
Sugar

Cut unpeeled lemon and oranges in pieces and put through food grinder. Peel and slice peaches. Combine fruit. Measure and add an equal amount of sugar. Place in a shallow pan and bake two hours in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit). Stir occasionally.

Cooking time may be shortened somewhat by making this jam on top of the stove in preserving kettle. Cook slowly and stir frequently to prevent scorching. Cook to jam consistency.

Lemon Honey.

(Yields about 5 glasses.)

Perhaps you are familiar with this honey jelly. It has the fragrance of flowers and a flavor that is unequaled. Blend in a saucepan, then bring to a full, rolling boil the following:

2½ cups full-flavored strained honey
¾ cup strained orange or lemon juice

Add, stirring constantly, ½ cup liquid fruit pectin

Heat to a full boil. Make jelly test. Boil a minute or two longer if necessary. Remove from heat. Skim and pour into hot sterilized glasses.

Good Host Has Porch Potation

Some persons believe that hospitality and heat do not mix, but they form a very gracious union when there is a porch potation in the refrigerator. A porch potation is a fancy name for any simple, cooling summer-time beverage, and it can be anything from the prosaic lemonade to some of the newer combinations which are equally thirst-quenching and refreshing. For variety, try the following:

Spiced Pineapple Juice.

Boil 1 cup sugar, 1½ cups water, 2 sticks cinnamon and 8 whole cloves for five minutes. Strain and cool. Add this sirup to 4 cups unsweetened pineapple juice, 1 cup orange juice and ½ cup lemon juice. Pour the entire mixture over crushed ice and serve in thin glasses.

Mocha Milk Shake.

Put into a beverage shaker two-thirds cup rich milk, one-third cup of cold coffee, 2 tablespoons malted cocoa, a few grains of salt and one-eighth teaspoon ground cinnamon. Shake very thoroughly and serve.

Snack Suggestion.

Scrambled eggs and broiled little sausages are popular, even in summer, for evening snacks. Vary the flavors by surrounding the platter with broiled pineapple rings, apricot or peach halves. This combination is tasty after a swimming or tennis party.

Old-Fashioned Ice Chest Refrigeration Returns In Modern Dress and With Some New Tricks

Knowledge of Proper Use of Cooling Box Vital to Housewife.

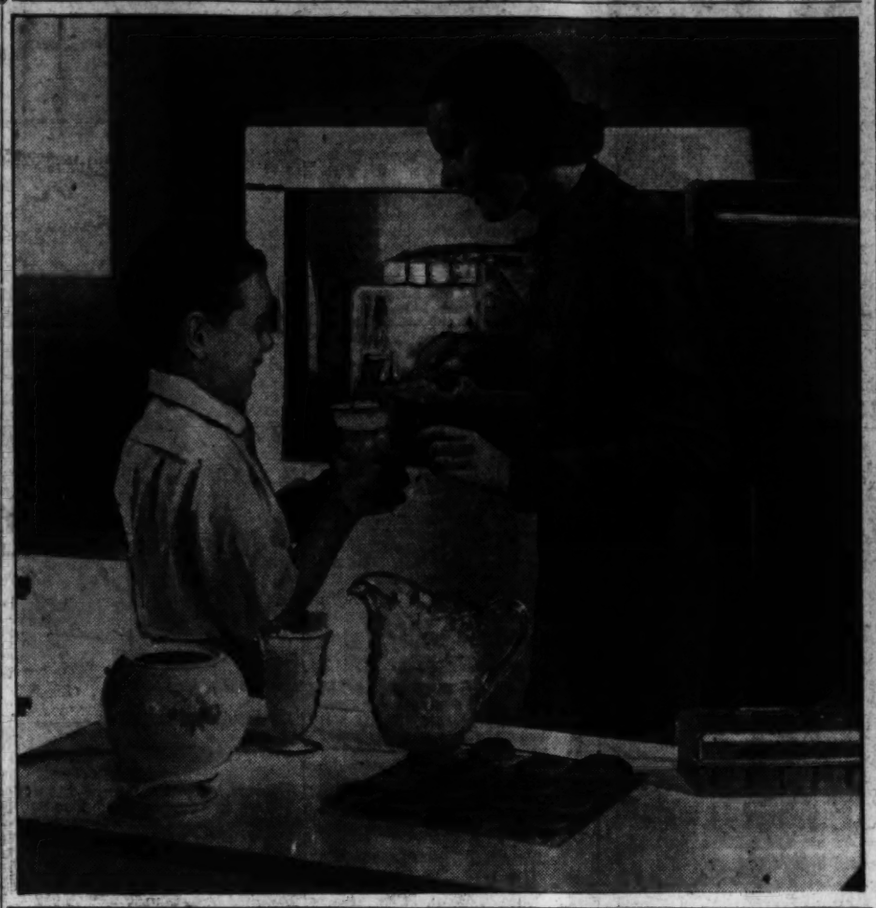
Cubes and Crushed Forms Available Commercially Now.

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

IN A SUMMER lush with vegetables and fruits, the problem of the housewife is not so much getting food as keeping it. Where shall she store her bargains and how? The modern refrigeration is the answer. And a knowledge of how to use the refrigerator intelligently is as important as how to buy and prepare the food that goes in it.

In the past only fresh produce and dairy items were deemed important enough to be stored at refrigerant temperature. Today modern taste has become so finely attuned to chilled and frozen foods that a far more varied use is made of the ice chamber. Canned fish and meat, canned tomato juice, fruit cocktails, fruit juices and assortments of appetizers line its icy shelves.

An interesting story in modern industry is that of the rise of the fallen hero—the modern ice refrigerator. From the ancient golden oak drip-pan variety, it has risen to the rank of a household ornament. Although any size of "shell" is obtainable, the 100-pound capacity box is most practical for families of moderate size. With scientific improvement in insulation, a refill of ice is necessary only once or twice a week, depending on humidity of weather and kitchen temperature.



Ice Has Advantages.

It is believed by some engineers that ice is a perfect refrigerant. As ice melts toward the bottom of a chamber, and as cold air falls, warm air rises. This action creates absolute food protection and prevents food taint. The water exhaust from ice absorbs 100 per cent of all odors and gases from foods. Unpleasant mingling of strong foods is entirely absorbed and washed out by the normal escape of ice as it melts.

Correct storage of food in a modern ice refrigerator requires contents to remain uncovered. This is contrary to other methods of refrigeration, but as foods possess breathing cells, it is evident that they need the cold air plus a little moisture to maintain vitality. Too intense cold or too tight a covering will kill life in fruits and vegetables. The normal temperature of a modern air-conditioned ice unit will prevent butter, cheese and other dairy products from turning "as hard as a rock," which has been anathema to discriminating hostesses.

Cubes Available.

Ice cubes may be purchased independently these days. Neat cartons of 50 or 100, or more or less, are being delivered locally. This timesaving feature brings about ease of mind in knowing that there will be ample extra cubes for large parties and fetes. Crushed ice in any amount or form is also inexpensive, quickly delivered and comfortably stored, as due to improvements in local manufacture, there is negligible spoilage. Crushed ice has been the lifesaver of many a party found dying on its legs due to insipid lukewarm beverages. It is obviously a timesaver in preparing fruit compotes, shrimp or melon cups and cocktails.

Ice punch bowls are ornamental as well as practical, for they keep punch cold for several hours. Colored cubes are being experimented with by local ice dealers and independently by local housewives. A dash of vegetable or fruit coloring is merely added to ice cubes. The recent development of the ice refrigerator "cuber" is remarkably handy and creates cubes in less than 5 minutes. This device is a rectangular box which is filled with warm water and possesses sharp square prongs to cut out desired number of cubes from the ice block. By adding tea to the warm water, iced tea can be produced in no time. A few hot-weather ideas suitable for immediate ice refrigeration follow:

Tomato Frappe.

A newly designed frappe is made by pouring the contents of a can of tomato juice into a mold and partially freezing it. Stir the mixture about every hour to keep it smooth and of even texture. Do not allow it to freeze hard. Serve this frappe just as you would tomato juice, except at breakfast. Frozen juice at breakfast is not quite as satisfying as it is at other times.

Tomato frappe is delicious to use with fish cocktails. Place the frozen mixture in a cocktail glass and add whatever fish is to be used. Salmon, tuna, shrimp, crab and sardines are especially good with the tomato.

For an added piquant flavor to blend with the fish, try adding a can of tomato sauce to the can of tomato juice before freezing. The seasonings that are in the sauce taste well with the fish.

Almond Ice Cream.

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
1½ teaspoons almond extract
½ cup finely shredded almonds
1 cup whipping cream.

Blend sweetened condensed milk, water and almond extract thoroughly. Chill. Add finely shredded almonds. Whip the cream to custard-like consistency and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into a mold. Place in ice refrigerator. After mixture is about half frozen remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from bottom and sides of pan. Beat until smooth, but not until melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Delicious garnished with crushed slightly sweetened fresh peaches. Serves six.

Decoration Hint.

You have probably tried the mirror-and-flowers idea in table decoration. You have a mirror and set in the center of it a bowl of colorful flowers. The clear reflection captures and multiplies the beauty of the blossoms. But at the first sign of dampness, or when cooking is going on, a steamy film often forms on the glass. To prevent this wipe the mirror with a cloth dipped in glycerine and polish with a second cloth. A light protective film of glycerine will be left on the mirror and keep it clear and shining.

Readers' Food Forum

Readers Send in Dessert Recipes to Quell Summer Thirst.

SUMMER is a time when one naturally thinks of desserts—especially the simpler ones that are easily prepared. Consequently, this subject has been chosen as the Readers' Food Forum this week. Following are what some Washington hostesses have to say of their favorite hot weather desserts:

Canned Fruit Sherbets.

Mrs. W. F. Vonasch, 531 Fern place northwest: "I approve of summer desserts being both delicious and quick as a wink to prepare. I can think of nothing so easy to toss together as a canned fruit sherbet. Here are two of my special summer timesavers. Pineapple sherbet is the extra special of the two. I dissolve one teaspoon of gelatin in four cups of milk, add two cups of sugar and one-half cup of crushed canned pineapple. To this I squeeze in a dash of lemon. I tuck the mixed ingredients away in the refrigerator and they turn into a cool, delicately flavored sherbet by dinner time.

"My other summer dessert favorite is a sherbet made of canned fruit cocktail. The method is identical to the pineapple sherbet recipe, except that I drain all the juice from the fruits, and I use no flavoring, as the cocktail is sweet enough. The amount of ingredients used will fill one large refrigerator tray or two small-sized trays."

Ice Cream and Gelatin.

Mrs. Elenore Marian Bibby, 4306 New Hampshire avenue northwest: "I have several amusing and conversation-getting dessert suggestions. Here are a couple of the gayest hot weather ideas I know of. To a tart, fresh lime gelatin dessert, mold in green and red Maraschino cherries. When stiff, unmold on lettuce leaves or in sherbet glasses and cut into cubes if desired. Just before serving, dip an ice cream cone scoopful on top of each serving. As the ice cream melts slightly it is a joy to behold, and my guests exclaim over the unusual flavor combination.

"With a summery light meal of cold cuts and salad, I serve a Spanish or Bavarian cream—which in itself is a rich, satisfying dessert. To make it even more memorable and exciting, I try one of my own inspirations. I melt chocolate peppermint candy, which I pour over the cream. I find the minty flavor is peculairly thirst-quenching these days."

Individual Molds.

Mrs. M. A. Harlan, 2330 High street southeast: "Experimenting with summer desserts is one of my hobbies. I have discovered so many pleasant ways of making refrigeration work for me this summer. One of my favorite experiments is a fruit and meringue dish. Into individual molds I pour crushed fruit of any seasonable variety. I add the white of an egg, beaten stiff—and allow to set. There are four in the family, and it's easy to see how quick and economical this dessert is. To make a torte out of it, I place a plain boiled custard over the fruit, and add egg white to this. My family favors another of my speedy summer refreshments. This is a simple little affair of 12 lady fingers lining the bottom of a tray or mold, plus a layer of ice cream. I alternate the layers until the mold is filled and allow the mixture to set a bit before serving."

Cold Beverage Dessert.

Mrs. Florine Long Gibson, Miramar Apartment Hotel: "In the rather extensive traveling I have done, I have picked up an assortment of household and cooking hints. Each locale has its individual dessert preference, but nowhere have I discovered such a practical, colorful and cooling idea as this one. Over a fresh or canned chilled fruit cocktail, I pour ginger ale which fizzes and bubbles as it is brought to the table. It produces rather the effervescent effect of champagne. Another equally ebullient beverage dessert is ginger ale topped with lemon sherbet. I serve this in tall gayly tinted glasses, with colored cellophane straws, to which I sometimes add colored ice cubes."

Food Editor's Note: The above suggestions are but a few of the appealing recipe ideas furnished by Post Forum Readers. To cite one example of Forum loyalty, Mrs. Florine Long Gibson has volunteered the loan of several unusual tested recipes from native cookbooks. We hope to publish excerpts in the near future. If other readers wish to share their culinary knowledge, the Readers' Food Forum will be glad to cooperate by publishing outstanding menu or recipe suggestions.

Sherbets and Ice Cream Especially Popular in Hot Weather.

CAPITAL DISHES

Empanadillas and Puree of Black Beans Featured at Cajiga's Supper Party.

TWO INTERESTING Puerto Rican dishes were served at the supper given last night by Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas in honor of their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Weiss. Mr. Weiss is associate editor of Time magazine.

The dishes were empanadillas and puree of black beans. The first named are crisp pastries filled with meat and made turnover style. The Cajigas' parties are famous for these dainties and they are always included on party menus by popular request of the guests.

The dark attractive Mrs. Cajigas served a variety of unusual and highly memorable "goodies." Rum sautern cocktails were passed before dinner, and the Cajigas recipe for this ultra cooling drink is copied a good deal about town. Radish roses filled with caviar and potato chips dipped in anchovy, Roquefort and cream cheese were popular, but the appetizer which created most excitement was the "Empanadillo." These dainty little meat pastries have such an indescribable flavor that other local hostesses will be eager to try the Puerto Rican recipe which appears here.

Mrs. Cajigas' menu contained:

Chilled crab flakes—rich cheese sauce
Baked ham Scalloped potatoes
Puree of black beans (a native spicy dish from Puerto Rico)
Fresh fruit salad
Hot rolls Coffee
French ice cream Little cakes

Hot Empanadillas.

Have 1 pound veal, 1 pound beef, 1 pound pork ground twice. Saute 2 large Texas onions, 3 stalks celery, 3 cloves garlic, 1 large green pepper all chopped fine. Add meat, cook slowly until almost done, then add 1 can minced pimientoes, 1 bottle capers, 3 chopped hard-boiled eggs and ½ cup raisins. Season with salt to taste, 3 red peppers and 3 dashes tabasco. When ingredients are thoroughly mixed cool, and place small portion in individual little pastry hulls. Any rich basic pastry is adaptable, but each turnover should be very tiny and neatly pinched to hold its shape. These highly seasoned pastries are fried in deep hot shortening and served at once.

New, Clever Salads To Win 5 Prizes In Post Contest

THE FOOD department of The Washington Post has long been "sold" on salads. For the last few months Washington women, and men too, have been thinking up new methods of concocting time-honored salad greens.

Have you a favorite salad suggestion? Is it a fresh vegetable combination, a fish, meat or fowl recipe, a seasonable fruit salad, or the eternally popular tossed salad with its own spicy dressing? If you have a preference for this summer dish, then this is your contest, and your opportunity for a cash award. Write your recipe carefully and mail at once to Alice Clayton, The Post food editor, not later than July 30. Cash awards are $3, first prize; $2, second prize, and $1 each for three additional prizes.

Gravy Hint.

Use browned flour to make meat gravies more savory. Spread a thin layer of flour on a shallow pan, heat it in a moderate oven until it is well browned, then cool and store the browned flour in a covered jar for use when needed.

CONSUMERS' COUNSEL

Advice of Washington Housewives Presented in New Food Page Feature; Write In if You Have Either Problems or Suggestions.

TODAY marks the first of a weekly series of Consumer Counsel chats. For several weeks the Post Food Editor has received queries on timely food topics. Realizing that Washington homemakers need, and want, self-expression in their cooking problems, it is this department's desire that they air them openly and proudly. It is desired that this Counsel be an unbiased institute for consumer opinion. To that effect, it is the wish of the Food Editor to answer your questions, publish your requests, suggestions and recipes. On items of disputable nature, local consumers will be given the opportunity of voicing their food likes and dislikes. Letters requesting cooking data on a variety of matters have been increasing from North, East, South and Middle West. As these nonresident readers are alert in their interest in Washington food matters, they are heartily invited to contribute, and perhaps profit by this and following Consumer Counsels.

Mrs. Sarah G. Gaines is chosen as our first Counselor, not only for her constant interest in current Post cookery, but because her recipe suggestion is a timely one.

Apt. 3, 2627 Adams Mill Road,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Miss Clayton: I have a very delicious and economical recipe for Pineapple Sherbet. It is most appetizing and strengthening for hot days. I have named this for that most fascinating memory,

SNOW WHITE.

Beat the whites of 3 eggs, add 1 cup of sugar, 1 can crushed pineapple, and same quantity of cold water. Beat all ingredients together. Place in aluminum mold in refrigerator. Freeze from 2½ to 3 hours, depending on how hard you wish it frozen. The pineapple and whites of eggs make this a most delicious and nourishing dessert for young and old.

Will you kindly publish this in your column, which would be very much appreciated by me? We have been readers of The Post for 20 years. Yours very truly,

MRS. SARAH G. GAINES.

Food Chopping Hint.

Sprinkle a little lemon juice over the knives of your food chopper to improve the flavor of raisins, dates and other dried fruits you grind. It also will help prevent them from sticking to the chopper.

Notables Attend Dinner Given Here For Howard Hughes and Flying Aides

Globe Girdlers Feted by Charge d'Affaires of Soviet Republics and Mrs. Constantia Oumansky; Cabinet Well Represented.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Through eight courses and half a dozen toasts, America's No. 1 globe-girdler, Howard Hughes, and members of his crew were feted at a dinner given last evening by the Charge d'Affaires of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mrs. Constantine Oumansky.

Eighty-two guests, seated at the long, lavishly laden table in the dining room of the Soviet Embassy enjoyed the function at which the spotlight played continuously on the flying quintet who recently returned from their record-breaking round-the-world flight. About 40 per cent of the journey by air was over Soviet territory, from the Baltic Sea to Behring Straits.

Sharing honors with man-of-the-hour Hughes at the event were his four companions, Richard Stoddart, radio engineer; Thomas Thurlow, co-pilot; Edmund Lund, flight engineer, and Harry Connor, navigator.

Guests at the dinner were the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings; the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes—the latter making her first appearance as a official hostess at a formal function; the Acting Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. J. M. Johnson; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison; the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Oscar Chapman.

High-Ranking Officials Are Among the Guests

The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy, and Mrs. Leahy were there, and Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Mrs. Jones; Admiral William H. Standley, Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, Chief of the Army Air Corps, and Mrs. Westover; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank Andrews, and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. H. H. Arnold.

Also the Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Walter A. Riddell, the Director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, Denis Mulligan; Col. E. R. W. McCabe, Assistant Chief of Staff, and Mrs. McCabe; Capt. John Towers, Acting Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, and Mrs. Towers; the Assistant Chief of the Division of European Affairs, State Department, Orsen Nielsen and Mrs. Nielsen; George F. Kennan, of the State Department, and Dr. George Lewis, director of aeronautical research of the National Advisory Committee of Aeronautics.

Noted Explorer Glimpsed in Crowd

Dr. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted explorer and president of the Explorers Club, was glimpsed among the guests; also, Dr. W. L. G. Joerg, representing the American Geographic Society, and Mrs. Joerg; Commander Howard A. Flanagan, of the New York World's Fair commission, and Mrs. Flanagan; Commander and Mrs. H. J. Nelson; David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; Guy W. Vaughan, president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

Other dinner guests included David Rosoff, chairman of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, and Mrs. Rosoff; the acting Soviet Consul General in New York, I. Solodov, and Mrs. Solodov; Mrs. Robert J. Archibald, of the Pan-American Airways; Mr. and Mrs. V. Bogdan, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Eryart, Miss Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Laurence Todd, Mr. and Mrs. A. Vartanian.

Also receiving much attention at the function were wives of members of Mr. Hughes' crew—Mrs. Thomas L. Thurlow, Mrs. Harry M. Connor and Mrs. Richard Stoddart. Others at the dinner were Albert I. Lodwick, New York flight manager for Mr. Hughes, and Mrs. Lodwick; W. Curtis Rockefeller, flight meteorologist at Floyd Bennett Field, and Miss Charlotte Mays, secretary to Mr. Hughes.

Members of the Embassy staff present were Col. and Mrs. Ivan Leontevich, Capt. and Mrs. Nikolai Ivanovich Bolotnikov, Mr. and Mrs. Nikolai M. Kashirin, and Konstantin M. Koukin.

German Attache And Mrs. DuPuy Marry in Berlin

Another bachelor diplomat deserts the ranks for the benedicts! News has just been received of the marriage recently in Berlin of Vice Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, Naval Attache of the German Embassy here, to Mrs. Elizabeth Henley DuPuy of San Diego, Calif.

No announcement of the engagement had been made. Frau Witthoeft-Emden, whose first marriage ended in divorce, will be the only American among the wives of the German Embassy officials here.

It is reported that the couple first met two years ago when Admiral Whitthoeft-Emden was on a visit to the West Coast. This is his first marriage.

The diplomat left several weeks ago for a vacation in Germany, but is expected to return in August with his bride. He has been a popular member of Capital society since coming here for duty several years ago.

Kanner-Sworzyn Wedding in N. Y.

Miss Hilda Annette Sworzyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Joseph Sworzyn, of Washington, was married yesterday to Lester Kanner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Kanner, of Freeport, Long Island.

The wedding took place at noon in Freeport, at the home of the bridegroom's parents. The ceremony was attended by members of the immediate families, including the bride's parents and brother, Herbert Sworzyn, of Washington.

Following a wedding breakfast, the couple left for a motor trip through New England and after September 1, will be at home at 483 North Long Beach avenue, Freeport.

Bride Selects Wedding Date

Miss Rachel Campbell, of Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Campbell, of Bronxville, N. Y., has selected September 10 as the date of her wedding to Jacques Reinstein, of the State Department. The ceremony will be performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and will be witnessed only by relatives and close friends. The future bride will have as her only attendant her sister-in-law, Mrs. Allan Campbell, jr.

Since coming to Washington several years ago, Miss Campbell has resided with a group of young women who leased a home on Thirty-fourth street and called themselves "The Nunnery." Miss Bargara Donald, of Boston, a member of the group, will return in the fall after a stay in California. Miss Elizabeth Morison, also of Boston, is spending the summer at her parents' home in Peterborough, N. H.

Papas to Make Home in Capital

After a wedding trip to New York and Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Sophocles Papas are making their home at 2000 N street. Their marriage took place Saturday at the home of Dr. P. S. Constantinople in Wesley Heights at 11 o'clock.

The Rev. C. Berry Austin officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a small reception. Given in marriage by her brother, George Lorentz, the bride wore a pale blue frock of sheer crepe with a short coat, shirred of the same material, and a corsage of white roses and lilies of the valley. She also wore a white picture hat, with a veil, and white gloves.

Mrs. Louise Ray, of New York, the bride's only attendant, was gowned in blue and white flowered crepe, worn with a wide-brimmed blue hat and a corsage of pink roses. Dr. Constantinople was best man.

The bride's ancestors were early West Virginia settlers, and her father was the late Egbert W. Lorentz, of Huntington. Pare Lorentz, of "The River" fame, is her first cousin. Mr. Papas is a well-known music teacher.

Mr., Mrs. Seegers Wed Last Week; Take Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Seegers, whose marriage took place Friday, July 15, will be at home in McLean, Va., after August 15. They are now on a 4,000-mile trip through the South and North, and will visit the bridegroom's family in Baton Rouge, La., and Mrs. Seegers' parents in Merrill, Wis., while they are away.

Their marriage took place at 8 p. m. in the chapel of the Swedish Lutheran Church here. Later, there was a wedding dinner at the Madrillon. Mrs. Seegers is on the clerical staff of the Social Security Board.

The Weisses Are Feted at Cajigas Home

Cocktail Party and Buffet Supper Honor Time Official and Wife.

With Mr. and Mrs. Myron Weiss as honor guests, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas entertained last evening at a cocktail party and buffet supper that drew virtually all of social Washington not dining at the Soviet Embassy with Howard Hughes. Mr. Weiss, associate editor of Time, Fortune and Life magazines, has an extensive circle of friends here, and it seemed that all of them turned out to the party given for him and his attractive wife.

The event also was in the nature of a farewel party for Dr. Cajigas' father and sister, Antonio Cajigas and Mrs. Felipe Yunque, of Puerto Rico.

In a room banked with gladioli and cosmos of a pale peach shade, Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas and their guests of honor received the arriving guests. The hostess was gowned in blue mousseline de soie, made with an exceptionally full skirt, ending in a small train. In her black hair Mrs. Cajigas wore a row of fresh gardenias, and at her waistline a small knot of blue African daisies.

Honor Guests and Hosts Are Old Friends

Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas and Mr. and Mrs. Weiss have been close friends for years, Dr. Cajigas and Mr. Weiss having met many years ago at a Pan-American Medical Society meeting. Considered the greatest lay authority on medicine, Mr. Weiss has been here to attend the National Health Conference to which he was a delegate.

Following their visit here Mr. and Mrs. Weiss plan to go to Richmond, Va., to visit some of the public health institutions there. Mrs. Weiss attended the conference sessions with her husband because of her interest in medicine and science, although she has devoted a great deal of her life to the study of law. She spent a year at the University of Paris taking a course in sociology and psychology and does a great deal of research work for her husband.

Mrs. Weiss, petite and dainty, wore a black taffeta frock that contrasted nicely with her blond hair and fair skin. It was made with a full swinging skirt and held over the shoulders by straps of an aquamarine shade.

Mrs. Felipe Yunque, also in black, chose the new material which is a sort of chiffon voile and swirled about her in frothy, billowing waves. Around the hem of the skirt were little white silk flowers and these flowers were also around the edge of the little bolero jacket with puffed sleeves that completed her outfit.

Cuban Envoy Is Ranking Guest

Anita Cajigas, who assisted her mother, chose for the affair a chiffon frock of a soft powder rose shade. It was made with tiny puffed sleeves and a bolero of matching lace, accented at the neckline with rhinestone clips. In keeping with the latest style for the younger young ladies, she wore a curled roll on top of her head, held by a fresh gardenia.

Among the guests at the dinner were the Cuban Ambassador, Pedro Martinez Fraga; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora Francisco Castillo Najera; the Spanish Ambassador and Senora Fernando de los Rios; the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Chenting T. Wang; the Minister of El Salvador, Hector David Castro; the Costa Rican Minister and Senora Ricardo Castro Beeche; the Guatemalan Minister and Senora Adrian Recinos; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Jay Heath; Mr. and Mrs. Barge Hartz; Col. and Mrs. Joseph Fegan; Maj. John O'Brien; Mr. and Mrs. William Sheer; Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Moll; Jose Tornos-Diego, Mayor of Ponce, Porto Rico, and his secretary, Jose Divas, and Dr. Roberto G. de Mendoza, First Secretary of the Cuban Embassy.

Senora de Castillo Najera sang and played the guitar. Among the compositions she played was one which had been written by her husband, the versatile Ambassador.

A. G. Heaths Announce Troth of Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Heath have announced the engagement of their daughter, Hilda Ann Jerrell, to Richard Crandall Breaden, of Berwyn, Md.

Colonial Village To Be the Home of Mr., Mrs. Travers

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. PAUL GORMAN TRAVERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gorman Travers, who were married last Friday, are now on a trip through Canada. They are expected to return early in August, and they will make their home in Colonial Village, Va.

The bride was formerly Miss Helena Bergmann Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Cook, of Washington. Mr. Travers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Travers, of Alexandria.

Members of the immediate families and a few friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed in the garden of the Cook summer cottage on Rhode River. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white net gown, fashioned with a pleated neckline, tiny puffed sleeves, a fitted bodice and a full skirt. Her finger-tip veil was of tulle, falling from a wired coronet, and her old-fashioned bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley, tied with satin streamers.

Mrs. George L. S. Scharf, the matron of honor, wore a yellow net frock trimmed with brown velvet ribbon and a leghorn hat with brown velvet bands. Her nosegay was of yellow roses. Minette Ann Prigg and June Overndoerfer, young cousins of the bride, were junior attendants. They wore blue princesses style frocks of organdy over taffeta.

Haskell Davis played the wedding music, and Wilson Lee Travers, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Following the ceremony there was an informal reception in the garden. Mrs. Cook, mother of the bride, was gowned in powder blue lace and wore a large straw hat of the same shade and a corsage of yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a pale blue frock with white accessories and a shoulder bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. Travers attended George Washington University, where she was a member of Sigma Kappa sorority. Mr. Travers was graduated from Virginia Military Institute in Lexington, Va., and from Southeastern University.

Miss Fox Wed To Mr. Mazzuchi Of Hartford

The Rev. Hubert Motvay Officiates at Church of Sacrament.

The Church of the Blessed Sacrament on Chevy Chase Circle yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, was the scene of the marriage of Miss Elinor Jean Fox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McDill Fox, of Washington, and Mario Sylvester Mazzuchi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Mazzuchi, of Hartford, Conn.

The Rev. Hubert Motray, dean of the school of canon law, Catholic University, officiated. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white lace, made on simple lines and set off with an Elizabethan collar and a long train. Lilies of the valley trimmed her filmy tulle veil, and her bouquet was of white roses sprigged with lilies of the valley.

Sisters Serve As Attendants

Mrs. Narcissa Hally, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was gowned in aqua marquisette, made with a fitted bodice and a full skirt, and she carried a bouquet of gladioli and delphinium. Miss Eileen Fox, another sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her frock of peach marquisette was fashioned like that of Mrs. Hally, and she carried a mixed bouquet of spring flowers.

Daniel Calano, of Hartford, was best man, and ushers were Francis Johnson, of Craftsbury, Vt.; Henry Clark, of Long Island, and John Hally, of Washington.

Following the wedding there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 5454 Thirtieth street. Mrs. Fox, assisted by Mrs. Mazzuchi, mother of the bridegroom, greeted the guests. Mrs. Fox was gowned in hyacinth blue lace, with a gardenia corsage and a wide-brimmed leghorn hat. Mrs. Mazzuchi had chosen a blue sheer print, a white straw picture hat and a corsage of yellow roses.

Bridegroom Is Studying Law

Shortly after the reception the newlyweds left on a honeymoon trip to New York. Upon their return they will live on Thirtieth street.

The former Miss Fox attended Immaculata Seminary and Dumbarton College. Mr. Mazzuchi is a graduate of Catholic University, and has been attending Georgetown University Law School. At the beginning of the next semester he will continue his law course.

Mrs. W. C. Sterling And Daughter Sail Today for Europe

Mrs. William Calhoun Sterling, wife of Dr. Sterling, and their daughter, Miss Margheritta Sterling, who recently returned from a short trip through Canada, will sail today on the liner Rex for Europe.

Miss Sterling, who attended Holton Arms last winter, is intensely interested in art and this trip was arranged, partially, to give her a first-hand education in the work of the old masters.

Upon arrival in Naples, Mrs. Sterling and her daughter will go first to the Isle of Capri, then to Rome, Florence and Venice, visiting along the way numerous other small places where there are famous art collections.

For a break in the art studies they will take a short motor trip through the Dolomites, and then go to Paris for a week to view "La Gioconda," and the "Venus de Milo." They will wind up their travels by a short visit to Cannes and Monte Carlo and will return to Washington via the Rex late in September. Mrs. Sterling is well known in Washington, where she is a leading member of the Junior League. She is the daughter of Mrs. Edwin H. Tillman and the late Commander Tillman, of Washington.

Dr., Mrs. Frank Green Motoring to Indiana

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Green, whose marriage took place last month in Boston, Mass., arrived in Washington Wednesday after a two weeks' Caribbean cruise.

They left yesterday by motor for Rushville, Ind., where they will make their home. Mrs. Green was formerly Miss Jean Green; a resident of Washington.

Mrs. Waters Gives Travel Talk at Club

Section Chairman Discusses Group Trips After Dinner Session.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Laura Waters, chairman of the travel section of the Women's City Club, was in charge of the program following the regular Thursday dinner last night at the clubhouse on Jackson place.

The travel nights have been among the most popular of the summer programs at the club. That at which Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, past president, told of her trip around the world brought out the largest attendance in many weeks. Miss Elva McNamara, vice president, presided last night in the absence of the president, Miss Marjorie Webster, who now is motoring in Mexico and will not return until the middle of August.

Mrs. Waters showed motion pictures and discussed travel from the standpoint of groups such as are often organized within the club to take trips, both long and short. She told of the tour of Europe from which she has just returned and on which she conducted a party including Mrs. Mary Ziegler, one of the City Club members. Mrs. Waters hurried back in order to leave this morning for a trip to Alaska, on which she will be accompanied by three of the club members, Mrs. Horace Fulton, Miss Christine Riley and Miss Mary Gott, who has gone ahead and will join them in Seattle. Mrs. Fulton has twice made European trips with Mrs. Waters.

The tour from which the travel section chairman has just returned included much in 30 days. She went over aboard the Queen Mary and returned on the Normandie, spending comparatively little time on the water. Going across the French Alps, she stopped on the French Riviera, from there went to the Italian Riviera and through Genoa and Pisa to Rome and Naples over the Amalfi drive and to the Isle of Capri and then back to Rome.

While there she had opportunity to see the congress of Italian youth—thousands of boys and girls, she said, representing Mussolini's youth movement.

From Rome she went up to Vienna and then to Milan and motored over the Swiss Alps, stopping at Lucerne. She motored through the Black Forest to Freiburg and Heidelburg and went up the Rhine to Cologne, over to Paris and then home. The others in the party, including Mrs. Zeigler, continued their trip to Holland, Belgium and England.

Among those present last night were Miss Riley, Mrs. Frederic Swift, Mrs. Betty Jones, Miss Maude Appell, Miss A. Hazel Swift, Miss Martha Lane, Miss Lois Garlock, Mrs. Charles McMullen, Miss Lulu D. Withers, Miss Jessie Rentz, Mrs. Anna Goodhart Howland, whose paintings have just been hung in a new exhibition at the clubhouse; Mrs. John Glover, Miss Jessie Elting, Mrs. B. F. Borland, Mrs. S. R. Jacobs, Miss Blanche Wise and Miss Annie E. Gilson.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

PUBLICITY for the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs next year will be handled by Mrs. Thomas H. Faris, of the Park View Woman's Club. During the past season she has served as press chairman for the Park View group and next year will have a still bigger job keeping the federation's activities before the public.

Mrs. Faris, the day after the final meeting of the season held by the federation, left by motor for West Virginia, where she made a short visit before going on to Ohio for the remainder of her vacation. She will return next month.

MISS LILIAN LATIMER, who has lived for the past ten years at the Hurt Home for the Blind, is returning today from a vacation of several weeks in Pittsburgh and Concord, N. H. In Pittsburgh she visited her brother, Randolph Latimer, who is director of the workshop in the School for the Blind there and is prominent in connection with the American Foundation for the Blind.

Miss Latimer, who is of a family prominent in the history of Maryland, was educated in the Maryland School for the Blind in Baltimore and later was a State worker, visiting the homes of persons who had lost their sight and teaching them to read and write. She continued active in this capacity until her health compelled her to give it up. She not only carried on this branch of social service, but at the same time kept house for her aged parents and five brothers.

She has the unusual distinction of having transcribed Latin textbooks used by Helen Keller in her college course. Although Miss Latimer did not know the language, her father read the words to her and she transcribed them for Miss Keller's use.

Last winter she taught two classes of sighted persons in training at the Red Cross as volunteer Braille transcribers. Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, who now do regular transcribing, were her first pupils and have since become warm friends of their teacher. She now proof reads their work for them, and there is much discussion of syllabic division when they are together.

During Miss Latimer's vacation she did not take with her the typewriter she customarily uses for correspondence, and those of her friends who read Braille received letters from her in it. The Gilchrists, who do not use the touch system for reading it, were obliged to co-operate in deciphering the characters. Mr. Gilchrist spelled out the words while his wife put them down and then they had them in left-to-right form—Braille is read in the opposite direction.

SPEAKING of vacations, Mrs. Albert Dodge, who makes her home at the Women's City Club, of which she is a member, has just returned from a visit in Vermont, and Miss Elsie Meskell, another resident there, is back from a trip to New York and Connecticut.

Mrs. Frederic I. Swift is substituting for Mrs. Margaret Hill, hostess at the clubhouse, while she is away on a visit in Georgia and Florida. She expects to return August 1.

C.A.R. Publicity Plans Revealed

Mrs. Amos A. Fries, chairman of publicity for the National Society Children of the American Revolution, has just issued a bulletin outlining publicity plans for the season for the 525 societies throughout the country.

Explaining that to obtain recognition in the newspapers it is necessary to do something which makes news, Mrs. Fries suggests ideas for societies which she has found successful in Washington.

Some years ago, when she first become interested in the work of the C. A. R., she took the presidency of Gov. Thomas Wells Society, whose membership was composed chiefly of young people of high school and college age. The piece-speaking, flag-drill programs used for the small children to teach lessons of patriotism were obviously unsuited to such a group, she said. The first year she tried inviting members of Congress and others in official life to address the meetings, talking on the Revolution. This did not develop sufficient interest so she tried another plan. She launched a study of the Revolution from the point of view of the part the ancestors of the members of the group had played in it.

The bulletin relates some of these facts to illustrate the unusual things which may be brought out by such a study program. The C. A. R's are now planning their work for the coming season, one phase of which will be a campaign for their proposed administration building here.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Aunt Sally Is Heard From.

In mercy walk; the weak defend,
Thus lesser folk may call you friend.
—Old Mother Nature.

"Is Aunt Sally still hostess of the Woodhouse Night Club?" Sue asked Tommy.

"I guess she is," replied Tommy. "The truth is I haven't been over there for so long that I'm almost ashamed to go now. The last time I was over there she told me that several of the patrons, both Coons and Skunks, appeared quite early this spring none the worse for their long winter sleep."

"Do they really sleep all the time all winter?" Sammy wanted to know.

"That's a tough question, Sammy," replied Tommy. "I don't suppose anybody knows just how much of the time they sleep when they are in a wild state, but it is most of the time after they really turn in for the winter. Some of them wake up now and then. We know that because sometimes one is seen, or tracks are found in the snow. But those that come out are not out for long. Then they go back to sleep. The weather makes a difference, too. If it is steadily cold they stay asleep. It usually is after a mild spell of weather that we find their tracks. I think Skunks come out oftener than Coons do, but there isn't much to tempt either to leave a good warm bed. I'll call up Aunt Sally and see if we may come over some night if you say so."

"Oh do, Tommy! I'd love to see Aunt Sally and her Night Club again," cried Sue, and Sammy agreed that he would, too.

Just then the telephone rang and Tommy answered it. Sue and Sammy pricked up their ears when they heard him say, "Good morning, Aunt Sally." He looked over at them and grinned. Then his face sobered. "Don't worry, Aunt Sally," said he. "What's that?—Did you say that you haven't seen her for a week?—That doesn't mean much. She probably wants a change of food and is off hunting—Of course I will. I'll take Sue and Sammy with me and we'll look everywhere I can think of. What's that—No, I don't think so. You know this isn't the hunting or trapping season. I wouldn't worry if I were you. She's been gone before and always come back.—All right. If we find anything I'll let you know.—Good-by, Aunt Sally." Tommy hung up and rung off.

"What is it? What's the matter? Tell us, Tommy, quick!" cried Sue.

"Do they really sleep all the time all winter?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Do you remember Crippy, the three-legged Coon we saw over there at Aunt Sally's last summer?" asked Tommy.

"Of course we do! How could we forget her?" cried Sue.

"She had five children in with her," added Sammy.

"That's right," said Tommy. "Well, Aunt Sally says she came extra early this year and came regularly every night until about a week ago. Then she stopped coming and hasn't been seen since. Aunt Sally is worried. She has a feeling that something has happened to her. Wants us to keep our eyes open when we are out in the woods for some sign of her. You heard what I told her."

"What could have happened to her?" Sue wanted to know.

"Well, accidents do happen. You saw what happened to that young Fox we found. If we hadn't happened along just when we did he probably would have died there. So accidents do happen. But I don't think that anything has happened to Crippy. Of course some careless trapper may have forgotten to take up one of his traps after the season was over, but I don't believe Crippy would ever be caught again in a trap. She lost one leg and she is too smart a Coon ever to get into another trap. She has just gone off somewhere and will come back when she is good and ready," said Tommy.

"Has she babies now?" inquired Sue.

"I hadn't thought of that!" exclaimed Tommy. "If she has she wouldn't be likely to go far from them or to leave them long at a time. We'll look around this afternoon."

Scandinavia Season's Topic Of Columbia Heights Art Club

Next Winter's Series to Be Devoted to Discussion of Crafts, Literature and Culture of Sweden and Norway; First Meeting Is October 6.

Sweden and Norway will be studied next season by the Columbia Heights Art Club, members of which yesterday received their new yearbooks, outlining the programs for the fortnightly meetings.

Mrs. DeWitt Croissant, now in Scandinavian countries with her husband, Dr. Croissant, head of the English department at George Washington University, will read a paper at the October 6 meeting, as a preview of the year's study. Mrs. Croissant will give a general discussion of the customs and people as a background for the program to follow. Hostesses for the first meeting are Mrs. Charles K. Hoover, club president, and Mrs. M. H. Fohrman. Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist is chairman.

With the yearbooks were suggested 60 books for summer reading to acquaint the members with the works of Norwegian and Swedish writers. The list was divided into fiction, biography, history, travel and economics.

First Program

To Be on Iceland

On October 20 the program will be devoted to Iceland. Mrs. Robert Hibben will be chairman. Mrs. Bare will discuss "Iceland and the Early Norse Culture," and Mrs. John W. Frizzell will review "The Bondman," by Hall Caine. Hostesses will be Mrs. George A. Cook and Miss Anne Darlington.

Mrs. M. A. Winter will be chairman of the program on November 3. Mrs. S. W. Morris will trace the history of Sweden and Norway, and Mrs. A. Rogers Tracy will describe the Skansen Museum in Stockholm. Mrs. John E. Briggs and Mrs. Charles Grandfield will be hostesses.

Mrs. Croissant will serve as chairman of the November 17 program at which Mrs. Hibben will talk on social conditions and Mrs. Lou P. Woodruff on women novelists. Mrs. Joseph R. McCuen and Mrs. Elmer S. Frazier are listed as hostesses.

December 1, Mrs. Cook will be chairman, Mrs. Arthur Seaton will discuss Grieg's music and Mrs. A. F. Williams, jr., will talk on great singers of the countries. The hostesses will be Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Dudley S. Bright.

Mrs. Frizzell will serve as chairman December 15 when Mrs. Grandfield will have a paper on poetry and Mrs. Bright will talk on folk and yuletide customs including wedding rites and the lighting of the summer fires. Hostesses are to be Mrs. Croissant and Mrs. J. Edson Briggs.

January 5, Mrs. Bare will be chairman; Mrs. Gilchrist will talk on Scandinavian scientists and universities and Mrs. Anton Heitmuller, on painters. Mrs. Winter and Mrs. Heitmuller will act as hostesses January 19, with Mrs. Grandfield as chairman. Mrs. Briggs will talk on architecture, including the old wooden belfries and ecclesiastical designs, and Mrs. Ernest Gude will have a paper on the flora and fauna. Hostesses will be Mrs. Frizzell and Mrs. Williams.

At the meeting February 2, Mrs. Woodruff will serve as chairman and Mrs. Hibben and Mrs. A. B. McManus as hostesses with Mrs. George Peckham giving a talk on Emanuel Swedenborg, and Miss Cornelia Hill on myths and sagas. February 16, drama will be discussed by Miss Darlington, costumes by Mrs. Fohrman. Chairman will be Mrs. Frazier and hostesses, Mrs. Woodruff and Mrs. Peckham.

The program committee became somewhat facetious in selecting spring topics. March 2, Mrs. Cook has been given the subject, "Swedish Cookery." On the same day Mrs. Frederick Pratt will talk on arts and crafts; Mrs. McManus will be chairman, and Miss Hill and Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, hostesses. Mrs. Winter's name was responsible for suggesting "Winter Sports of the Scandinavian Countries," and she was assigned "Sports and Games," for the March 16 program. Mrs. T. H. Mitchell, on that date, will have a paper on the men novelists; Mrs. Fohrman will be chairman, and Mrs. Harry K. Fulton, joint hostess with Mrs. Mitchell.

Election of officers and annual reports are scheduled for April 6. The present officers, who will have served but one year, will be re-elected if the usual custom is observed, and a light talk by Mrs. Daniel will follow. She has been given the subject, "In the Lion's Den," and is free to follow it in any direction she fancies.

Other programs will be that on April 20, with Mrs. Morris as chairman, Mrs. McCuen giving a talk on "Swedish Settlements in America;" Mrs. Frazier on "Swedish-American Writers," and with Mrs. Tracy and Mrs. Gude as hostesses. May 4, Mrs. Bright will act as chairman, Mrs. Gilchrist and Mrs. Bare will be hostesses, and readings from Ibsen will comprise the program. The closing luncheon of the season has been set for May 18, with Mrs. Bare, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Frazier as the committee in charge.

Club Membership

Limited to 30

The active club membership is limited to 30. Honorary members are Mrs. Charles G. Abbott and Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson and the one life member is Mrs. Edward Russell, of Waynesboro, Va. There are also associate members, including Mrs. Briggs, Mme. J. S. Coutinho, Mrs. Fulton, Mrs. Seaton and Mrs. Samuel Swiggett.

Officers in addition to Mrs. Hoover are Mrs. Hibben, vice president; Mrs. Gilchrist, recording secretary; Mrs. Lou P. Woodruff, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frazier, treasurer, and Mrs. Robert McFall, director to the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Past presidents have been Mrs. Martha Lemon Schneider, who served from 1899 to 1903; Mrs. Emily Hyde, Mrs. Evelyn Clark Morgan, Mrs. Elizabeth Ayers Stokes, Mrs. Sarah A. Wolhaupter, Mrs. Sarah J. Croissant, Mrs. Ellis D. Logan, Mrs. Edward A. 4 Men Seized In 'Confidence' Penny Gamble Drugs, Stage Money Taken in Raid; Players Have Lost $2,000.

Officers of the Police Pickup Squad yesterday seized four white men, accused by detectives of being members of a confidence gang that has won more than $2,000 by matching pennies, mostly from transients passing through Washington.

The four men, held for investigation, were captured in the 1300 block of Vermont avenue northwest, on information given by four men arrested earlier this month. Arrest was made by Lieut. Joseph Shimon and members of his squad, following a 40-hour vigil.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said last night one of the four arrested yesterday is wanted by police in Quebec, Canada, for a $10,000 confidence job staged seven years ago. The others, he said, have lengthy criminal records in the United States and abroad.

Seized in the raid yesterday were a quantity of drugs, two needles, and two thick rolls of stage money. Pictures of the men were to be forwarded to persons who have complained of losses by the penny-matching game in Washington.

These losses, according to Inspector Thompson, total at least $2,000, known to have gone into the pockets of the gang.

The gang operated in the vicinity of Union Station and around the bus terminal.

Those arrested yesterday were Eugene R. Allen, 62, Dayton, Ohio; Carl P. Shepherd, 51, Columbus, Ind.; John C. Shepherd, 46, Indianapolis, Ind., and Ernest R. Weber, 48, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

RIDDLE OF F. D. R.

San Diego, Calif., July 21, 1938.

He comes out looking very grim. Impassively he peers right and left. His mouth blossoms suddenly into that half-taunting, half-challenging smile, the corners curling up. He raises an arm and half rotates a perpendicular hand back and forth, in his own peculiar salutation, unlike any other wave of the hand.

Harry Hopkins . . . household god.

* * * *

As the crowds roar rises shrilly, he is nodding his head jerkily, wagging that strong jaw with the unintentional indulgence of a preoccupied father toward demonstrative children. Then he begins to talk in a vibrant, conversational tone.

* * * *

That is how millions of Americans see Franklin Roosevelt for the first time. That is the three-part greeting—the smile, the nods, the wave of the hand. Those who have seen it many times cannot appraise the tremendous voltage it shoots into a crowd which sees it for the first time.

"—the candor of the sphinx."

Neither the Sphinx nor the Mona Lisa had much on Franklin Roosevelt. After five years in the White House he is still a baleful mystery to his enemies, a smiling enigma to his friends. Toward both he turns a smiling mask; and if any one has ever seen him completely divested of it, his lips are sealed.

* * * *

Rooseveltian hostility transformed Al Smith from the idol of millions into the mere landlord of an office building. Rooseveltian friendship transfigured Harry Hopkins from an obscure social worker into the household god of millions; a Rooseveltian whim might even put a Harry Hopkins in the White House.

* * * *

At close range there seems undeniably to be a trace of arrogance in Franklin Roosevelt. Like George Washington, he is gracious toward inferiors and subordinates, condescending to his equals. No one has ever detected a trace of humility in him, except perhaps toward a historic battlefield like Gettysburg or toward a fleet of battleships.

* * * *

Clearly there is a patronizing note in him toward those who disagree. Much is said about how easily he is influenced by the last person who talks with him ("somebody saw him before he went to bed" or "someone got in the last word"). But there is no recorded instance to prove that he has ever changed his mind about anything fundamental.

"The wise men disagree."

An Ernest Lindley, a Ludwig, or a Hugh Johnson paints word pictures of him with astonishingly different results. Like the elephant, he is a diverse creature to different wise men, depending on what they have clutched. To some he is the saviour, to others the foe of the capitalist system.

* * * *

He has a robustious sense of humor. He can make a cabinet member's wife model before him the gown she is to wear before King George, and he can autograph a menu "the Chef of Krum Elbow." Again, he can snub Governors and Senators standing at his side.

* * * *

Keen eyes watched the crowds on his last trip. They looked at the same thing and saw different things. After watching one audience carried away with an almost religious fervor, said one observer: "He is telling them, in the language of another friend of the common people, that in his Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so he would have told them."

And another who looked on said: "This wild gratitude is a lively anticipation of more favors to come."

* * * *

As he fishes on the Pacific, the man who has yet to say a word in praise of hard work is more than ever before the invincible idol of those who work with their hands.

Society Must Adjust Itself to the Times, Morley Tells Strayer College Graduates

Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, told members of the Strayer College graduating class last night that "technological maladjustment" imperils modern society more than technological unemployment.

Speaking to an audience of more than 1,500 that overflowed the Mayflower Hotel ballroom for the commencement exercises, Morley explained that by "technological maladjustment," he meant society's failure to adjust itself to rapid scientific advances.

"Technological unemployment," he said, "is generally a temporary problem which adjusts itself. When the automobile supplants the horse for transportation purposes, openings for mechanics in time more than replace jobs lost by blacksmiths. But when the airplane makes it possible to circle the globe in less than four days no comparable improvement in political relationships is automatically indicated."

For an individual to adjust himself to the quickly changing world he must combine "traditionalism and liberalism," Morley said.

"We cannot make progress unless we are willing to move with the times," he declared. "But equally we cannot hope to make progress unless we know whence we have come and why we came that way."

The Post editor pointed out that in a democracy the public should possess "a critical faculty, a will for progress and a sense of humor. With these characteristics the individual life becomes a great adventure. More to the point, social life then moves steadily forward to accomplishments which no dictatorship can hope to rival."

The 200 graduates last night included 96 men and women from the Strayer College of Accountancy and 104 who won secretarial diplomas. Presiding at the exercises was Elgie G. Purvis, vice president of the college. He introduced Paul Matthews, high-ranking member of the accounting class, and Marie Lynch, who graduated with high distinction from the secretarial school.

Candidates for degrees from the accounting school were presented by Franklin Chace, a member of its faculty. Those from the secretarial school were presented by L. E. Smith, director of admissions. Invocation and benediction were offered by the Rev. National C. Acton, curate of St. John's Episcopal Church. Edmond S. Donoho, president of the college, presented the degrees.

Among those present at the exercises were Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Donoho, parents of the present head of the school. The elder Mr. Donoho was one of the founders of the school in 1904.

President Donoho conferred accounting degrees and awarded secretarial diplomas to the following groups:

RFC Activities Are Described At Symposium

Agency's Counsel Speaks at G. W. Discussion of Corporations.

Activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since its organization in 1932 were detailed before the Symposium on Government Corporations at the George Washington University law school last night by Claude E. Hamilton, jr., RFC general counsel.

His discussion covered RFC aid to banks, railroads, insurance companies and other business enterprises and the legal problems arising from these operations.

"The expanding, diversified aspect of the work of the RFC," he said, "is evidenced by the fact that the RFC act has been amended and enlarged more than 30 times since its passage in 1932. Perhaps the principal reason for ever-widening and kaleidoscopic function of the RFC is to be found in its flexibility, which makes possible an almost automatic adjustment to current needs and trends.

"A Governmental organization set up and operating as a successful private business, it is operating constantly in the 'twilight zone' between Government and business. When private non-Governmental enterprises for one reason or another have been unable to meet the demands upon them the RFC, a public governmental agency, has filled the gap. The corporation never steps in unless there is a need and always steps out when that need is passed. By these steps the RFC hopes to continue to lead the way to a lasting, sound and prosperous national economy."

The symposium will close today with an address by James Lawrence Fly, general counsel of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Alexandria Man Bags Marlin After Fish Wrecked Boat

This is the story of a fish that almost got its man.

Dr. William B. Wilkins, of Alexandria, Va., was the man and he tells the story and before long will have two trophies to hang on his office wall to prove it. These will be a 60-pound marlin and a bit of boat planking with the business end of the marlin's saber-like nose thrust through the wood.

Tuesday Dr. Wilkins was fishing off Ocean City, Md., in a boat manned by Capt. Marvin Williams. Dr. Wilkins hooked a marlin.

In 29 leaps, the fish tore at the hook with futility. Then, about 75 feet from the boat, it turned and charged.

This bull-like rush brought it squarely against the side of the boat, where it was stopped with 9½ inches of its deadly sword imbedded in the 1½-inch planking below the water line. Leaking badly, the boat was headed for shore.

Syndicate Gaming Believed Crushed By District Police

With eight members of the Carroll Peyton (Nobby) Nuckols gaming ring now in jail and "Nobby" a suicide, police were confident yesterday they had delivered a fatal blow to syndicate gambling in the District.

Two of those convicted, Moe Morganstein and Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos, have appealed to the United States Supreme Court for a final review, and are at liberty on bond.

Jailed yesterday were Robert A. Murray, Anthony Costello, Harry O. Adams and George W. Godfrey, nine months to three years; Vincent A. Marino, 9 to 18 months, and Bernard Newyahr, John A. Clements and Bernie M. Traub, 6 months to a year and a day.

Sen. Wagner Pledges Aid in Health Drive

New Yorker Says Plans Too Long Delayed in Wire to Miss Roche.

Dr. Frank Says G. O. P. Will Give Subject Consideration.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, yesterday became the first member of Congress to pledge co-operation in the formulation of a national health program.

"We have too long delayed the necessary first steps in developing comprehensive measures to cope with perhaps the most important single cause of economic insecurity," he said, in a telegram to Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the President's Interdepartmental Committee which conducted the National Health Conference ended Wednesday.

"The health of the people is obviously a major concern of government," said the New York Democratic leader, advising Miss Roche she may "be assured of my co-operation in every way possible."

In Proposed Legislation.

Miss Roche yesterday stated that the health program will be embraced in proposed legislation for submission to Congress next year, but first suggestions will be invited and considered as to details. As presented to the National Health Conference, the plans calls for an annual expenditure of $850,000,000 on all phases of activity, including hospital construction.

"We intend to move forward expeditiously to a plan of action," she said in her reply to Senator Wagner.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, Chairman Glenn Frank, of the Republican Program Committee, announced that the question of adequate medical care will be carefully discussed at the committee's "summer session" August 3.

D. C. Doctor to Participate.

Among the authorities who will participate are Dr. A. C. Christie, Washington radiologist and unwavering foe of socialized medicine and health insurance; Dr. S. S. Goldwater, New York City hospital commissioner, who cautioned against precipitate action at the Capital conference this week, and Dr. John F. Peters, a leader in the Committee of Physicians' liberal movement and who spoke at the same meeting.

"Every aspect of this vital and highly debatable question will be discussed in an objective manner by competent and experienced authorities," said Dr. Frank. "Health insurance in its various forms, voluntary and compulsory, will be presented to the members of the program committee both by proponents and by vigilant critics.

"The end sought is a responsible scrutiny of a problem which now is of high national significance and which contains the possibilities both of great social advances and of great social errors."

Contributions of $144 to The Post's Camp Fund Mean 2 Gay, Healthful Weeks for 10 Children

Camping days—14 of them—lie ahead for all ten underprivileged children whose stories were told in yesterday's Post.

Contributions to the camp fund totaled $144 yesterday. That means two weeks of healthful life in the open air for ten boys and girls who need a vacation but cannot afford one. So far The Post's fund has assured 15 youngsters such a vacation.

A donation of $1 will provide one day at camp for a child whose need has been certified by the camp scholarship committee of the Council of Social Agencies. One week will be covered by a $7 contribution. If you would like to give one child a full two-week camp term, send $14 to The Post camp fund editor or drop it in the fund box in the lobby of The Post building.

The stories of ten additional needy children are presented today.

Jane is 15 years old. Her mother is dead and her father in a sanatorium; she lives with an uncle. Her three married sisters contribute nothing to her support. Her uncle has grown to think of Jane as a burden. Jane is a bright, normal girl, struggling to keep up her morale in the face of discouragement. Camp would give her new faith in herself and a vacation from loneliness and persecution.

Sixteen-year-old Russell is waging a losing fight against a similar family situation. He grew up with a beloved foster mother after his father's death. Then his foster mother died. Still grieving her loss, he returned to his own mother, who meanwhile had remarried. Antagonism sprang up immediately between him and his stepfather. Russell needs a change in environment, which his family cannot afford to give him.

Henry's father deserted his mother soon after Henry was born. His mother's job keeps her away from home during the day and evening, and he has been brought up by his grandmother. A quirk in the aged woman's mind led her to teach Henry to consider her as his real mother and of his mother as merely an aunt. Now 15, Henry has been buffeted between the two women until he tends toward delinquency. Realizing his own need, he applied for a job to pay his tuition at a camp, only to find the child labor law keeps him from working.

Mary Jane, 14, also stands in need of a normal group experience with young people. Her invalid father and mother died within ten days two years ago. Constant attendance on them accustomed her to being with older people until she forgot how to play and make friends of her own age. The couple with whom she lives now cannot afford to send her away.

Eleanor, 12, has been repressed all her life by crowded home conditions and by bickering between her Italian father and the Hungarian grandparents with whom she lives. She makes friends with difficulty because of a tendency to act aggressive among children of her own age. As a result of faulty home training, she needs the wholesome life and the guidance program she will receive at camp.

Depression forced the Brown family into a dark, three-room basement apartment. A home crowded with four younger brothers and sisters, combined with her parents' financial worries, creates an unwholesome background for 18-year-old Betty. She needs and deserves a vacation from domestic strain.

Esther, 13, and her 12-year-old sister, Hilda, live with their parents and five younger boys and girls on their father's $48 monthly WPA wages. Esther is pale and under weight. Last year she was forced to leave school because of illness. Both girls need two weeks of supervised recreation and health guidance.

Correctional school lies ahead for 12-year-old Barbara unless she can be taken from an unhappy home environment for a while and given new perspective on her problems. The daughter of her mother's previous marriag's previous marriage, she half-brothers and her half-sister. out marriage, she resents her two Her stepfather's $16 WPA salary is insufficient to send her to camp, especially with a new baby expected soon. Her mother threatens to send her to an institution, but social workers believe two weeks away from home during which she can find more wholesome outlets for her energy and become adjusted to girls her own age, will make such a step unnecessary.

Eight-year-old Arthur's mother has been in the District Home for feeble-minded since his infancy. His father intrusted him to the care of his grandmother, who pays his board at a foster home. Arthur is so sensitive about his parents' inadequacy that he fails in school despite an average mentality. He is active and loves outdoor life. Transferred to the wholesome environment of camp, Arthur may develop into a normal, happy child.

U. S. Aide's Wife Found Dead; Illegal Operation Held Cause

Coroner Performs an Autopsy on Mrs. Charles Sweeny, Daughter of Rep. Crosser; Police Hold Woman in Whose Home Death Occurred.

Mrs. Justine Sweeny, 29, daughter of Representative Robert Crosser, of Cleveland, Ohio, died suddenly late yesterday in the bedroom of an apartment at 2550 Fourteenth street northwest. She was the wife of Charles Sweeny, 8322 Draper lane, Silver Spring, Md., an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission, with whom she eloped in 1931.

After an autopsy at District morgue, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued the official statement that ::death was produced by an attempted abortion."

Mrs. May Connors, a widow, in whose room Mrs. Sweeny died, was held for investigation last night at Second Precinct Station. She called Dr. B. S. Johns, who pronounced Mrs. Sweeny dead from unknown causes.

He said Mrs. Sweeny met him at about 4:30 p. m. yesterday when he left work and left their automobile with him, explaining she was going shopping. He told police she arranged to meet him at Fourteenth and Fairmont streets, near the building in which she died.

He said he telephoned his home when his wife failed to appear for the appointment and learned then she was dead.

Sweeny said he did not know Mrs. Connors.

Representative and Mrs. Crosser were said to be at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Neither was in good health and it was understood efforts were being made to have them notified by their physician of their daughter's death.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Sweeny is survived by two small children, Isabel, 4, and Nancy, 2.

18 WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Wee Willie Williams.

George P. Marshall, prime mover in what he calls that great civic institution, the Washington Redskins, formally unveiled Head Coach Ray Flaherty to Washington football writers for the 1938 season yesterday.

POVICH.

Glibly skipping the fact that the best players on the Redskins' roster are as yet unsigned and squawking for salary raises, Mr. Flaherty waxed optimistic about his outlook. The Redskins will be as capable a team as they were last year, he said. But the opposition will be tougher, he added. Having said that, he sat down.

Then Flaherty suddenly remembered something he forgot to say. "I want to tell you about Wee Willie Williams," he said. "Wee Willie will play some grand football for us this season if we can find him."

It seems that the Redskins have signed a character in this Wee Willie Williams, 6-foot 3-inch stripling who weighs only 245 pounds in playing condition. The report was out that George Marshall had given him a $50 bonus for signing his Redskin contract.

Just an Advance!

"I deny that," said Mr. Marshall, leaping to his feet wildly. "Those sort of stories hurt my reputation as a businessman. 'Tis true I gave Wee Willie $50, but it was no bonus. It was an advance on his salary. I do not want any wrong impressions."

Anyway, it seems that Wee Willie is destined to play a lot of tackle for the Redskins this fall . . . if they can find him. Coach Flaherty himself is authority for the fact that Wee Willie is an excellent tackle, a cinch to make good in professional ranks.

"I spotted him playing up there at Gonzaga on the Coast, where I went to school," said Flaherty. "I wasn't long inquiring about that big guy who was taking out the entire right side of the other line and generally making himself a nuisance to the ball carrier . . . not his own ball carrier, either. So I told Mr. Marshall I wanted Wee Willie on our football team this year.

Where Is Willie.

"I found out that Wee Willie was working at a filling station in the off season and I hustled over there to talk to him. I found the filling station all right, but didn't see anybody that resembled Wee Willie. There were a couple of 200-pounders around the place, but I was looking for a fellow who in the off season had to weigh about 260. Finally, I found the boss.

"'Where,' I inquired politely, 'is Mr. Wee Willie Williams?'

"'That,' said the boss, 'is exactly what I want to know. Incidentally, I've just made up my mind that your Mr. Williams doesn't work here any more.'

"The next thing I discovered about Wee Willie," went on Flaherty, "was that he was in training. He was in training around Spokane for his first professional fight. He was getting 25 bucks for fighting some round-heel in a four-rounder. I knew that the Redskins could match that kind of dough and I wanted to see Wee Willie.

"I caught up with him in the gym. He already had a manager and he was giving the manager 50 per cent of the purse. That left $12.50 for Wee Willie. I didn't see the fight, but they tell me Wee Willie got slapped around something awful and lost a couple of teeth and then got up off the floor and won the fight by a first-round knockout.

Easy Come.

"That night, Wee Willie was celebrating with his $12.50 end of the purse. He had all the boys down to the corner lunch for a big feed. I asked Willie about that. I asked him why he wanted to blow his earnings on one big feed.

"'Oh, well,' said Willie through a pair of puffed lips, 'you know how it is . . . easy come, easy go.'"

All that Wee Willie has to do to earn a job with the Redskins is to beat out Capt. Turk Edwards, All-Pro tackle, and Jim Barber, another one of the league's top tackles.

Redskin University President George P. Marshall, who looks favorably on football as a varsity sport, reiterated yesterday that Sammy Baugh, his freshman star of last year, would return to the Redskin campus. He pooh-poohed the day's press reports which stated that Baugh was dissatisfied with the terms offered him, and would make the Redskins pay him his price.

"We will pay Baugh his price," said Marshall, "but it will be my price, too. I will not have any trouble with Sammy Baugh. He can't keep away from football. If it came right down to it, he'd probably pay us to let him play. We aren't far apart on terms right now. Everything is agreeable now except that Baugh wants his books in addition to his scholarship."

With Richards Vidmer

Laughing Leader.

Seventeen summers ago the hustling young catcher of the Worcester club went to his manager and with his usual broad grin asked for a couple of dollars.

VIDMER.

"What for?" asked the manager.

"I'm broke, and I'm hungry," the catcher replied.

"All right, son," the manager then said, reaching into his pocket and handing the lad a five-spot. "Take this and send me a couple of postcards from California next spring."

"California?" the catcher repeated. "How am I going to get to California?"

"Oh, the Cubs will attend to that. I've just sold you to Chicago."

* * * *

That was the beginning, 17 years ago. The end of the story is that the young catcher, who was broke and hungry in 1921, just has been made manager of the Cubs. His name, of course, is Gabby Hartnett.

His appointment came as something of a surprise. Not that a change wasn't anticipated in the leadership of the club, but everyone seemed to think that if Charlie Grimm was to go, Tony Lazzeri would get the job. However, P. K. Wrigley selected Hartnett instead, and after the first few raised eyebrows, everyone seems to feel that he made a wise choice.

Hartnett has been a leader without title almost since he joined the club. In good years and bad he has kept the team hustling by his own example and his constant chatter. Last year when Grimm was forced to relinquish the reins because of an attack of lumbago Gabby stepped in and piloted the club through a road trip that produced 9 victories in 12 games. In fact, Gabby's success might have been partly responsible for Grimm's quick recovery.

Goodbye, Good Luck.

Grimm must have known then that his position was not secure; but when it was announced that he was released and replaced by Hartnett, he took it admirably.

Phil Wrigley has made sudden shifts before. He fired Joe McCarthy in the heat of a campaign and appointed Rogers Hornsby to the helm. A few years later he fired Hornsby and gave the managerial title to Grimm. Both changes were followed by mutterings of ill feeling. McCarthy departed with the conviction that he had been undermined by Hornsby and Hornsby took his leave quite certain that he had been given a raw deal, for the Cubs were moving toward the pennant, eventually won it, and the players didn't cut Hornsby in for even a part share of the spoils.

But when Grimm was told that he was through, he put his hand on Hartnett's shoulder, smiled and said, "good luck, Leo. That's baseball." Which, it seems to me, is the way ball players should take the bad news that they have served out their usefulness.

And Gabby may be just the tonic that the Cubs need to shove them right through to pennant. They have been hovering in the neighborhood of the league leadership through three months of campaigning and if all they need is a sudden spark to send them soaring upward, Gabby will light it.

The ball players admire and respect him and everyone who knows him or even sees him from a grandstand seat is his friend. He is big and jolly, rollicking with good will toward all and malice toward none; filled with endless energy, affable to an extreme and always ready with a laugh or a friendly word.

Keep Firing.

Nor is it likely that he will change with the added responsibility that has been thrust upon him. For Gabby is just naturally good natured. He is the type who can lead men with a laugh on his lips instead of a harsh word of command.

Yet behind his good nature is a baseball brain that thinks serious thoughts and plans carefully. It isn't just hit or miss with Gabby, as one might be led to believe from outward appearances. He makes up his mind and sticks to his decision.

* * * *

A few years ago he was hooked up with Carl Hubbell as the battery for the National League in the All-Star game. Before the contest started he took King Carl aside.

"These American leaguers never have seen your screwball," he said. "I think the best thing to do is to go in there and just keep throwing it at 'em. You'll stand 'em on their heads the first time around anyway."

So Hubbell started throwing screwballs the minute he stepped in the box. But the first man he faced hit safely, the next walked. Hubbell beckoned Hartnett from behind the plate for a consultation.

"The screwball doesn't seem to be working very well. Maybe I had better throw something else," the pitcher suggested.

"Never mind. Just keep on firing it in there," Hartnett replied. "Those guys were lucky."

So Hubbell went back to the box and just kept on throwing one screwball after another with the result that he fanned six of the next seven men who faced him, five of them in succession. Gabby had the right idea from the beginning.

Handley Hit In 9th Wins For Pirates

Phlies Bow 5-4; Brown Wins 13th Game in Relief Role.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 21.—Lee Handley clouted a booming triple to right-field with the bases loaded in the ninth inning today to give the Pirates a 5-to-4 victory over the Phillies, thereby keeping the Bucs a game and a half in front in the National League race.

The victory gave the Pirates the series with the Phils three games to one and marked their nineteenth victory in the last 24 games. It also was the thirteenth win of the year for Mace Brown, the Bucs' relief pitcher extraordinary, who succeeded Jim Tobin in the ninth after the Phils had scored two runs each in the eighth and ninth frames to go in front.

Tobin pitched five-hit shutout ball through the first seven innings and sported a 2-0 edge with two frames to go. In the eighth, however, Del Young's double and Herschel Martin's single sent two runs across to tie the score, and in the ninth Buck Jordan's two-bagger brought another pair home.

This seemed a safe lead for Lefty Al Smith as the first batter went out in the Bucs' ninth, but Lefty Al loaded the sacks on an error, a single and a walk, and, after Claude Passeau relieved Smith, Handley promptly unloaded them with his payoff wallop.

Kelley to Hurl Against Browns

Ten victories in their last 13 games is the record of the Nats as they move into a three-game series with the St. Louis Browns today.

After sweeping a four-game series with the Athletics, the Nats won two out of there from the Indians, one out of three from the White Sox and swept a three-game series with the Tigers.

Today Harry Kelley, deemed ready after four days rest, will be sent to the mound against the Browns.

Reds Get Infielder.

Cincinnati, July 21 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds acquired Nolen Richardson, 33-year-old infielder, from Baltimore of the International League today, for an undisclosed amount of cash and the release on option of Justin Stein.

Baltimore Teams Win In Columbia Tourney

Charley Malone, Redskins End, and Maury Fitz-Gerald Win 2d Low Net in Two-Ball Foursome Play; Lord-Barr Next.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

With the Hillendale duo of Emmet Voelkel and William Scott accounting for the low net prize and Rolling Road's golfing pals, Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes winning low gross, local teams were shunted to the runner-up roles in the Maryland State Golf Association's two-ball event yesterday at Columbia. Threatening rain held the field to 24 entries.

Voelkel and Scott, hitting selective drives and alternate shots, played each nine in 40 shots, including the last four holes of the back nine in even par, and used a 16 handicap to good advantage, for a net 62. Overton and Barnes were only three strokes over regulation figures with a 36-37—73, that won low gross honors.

Charles Malone, better known as an end on the Redskins, and Maury Fitzgerald, both of Kenwood, won second low net with 41-37, 78-12, 66.

Malone whose golf has been limited the last few years, was booming his tee shots around the 300-yard markers, and was from 50 to 100 yards ahead of Overton and Barnes, two of this section's finest linksmen.

A host club pair, Merrill Lord and L. Stewart Barr, turned in the second best gross score of the day, a 75, and, after deducting a five handicap, won the third low net with a 70.

Two more teams from the Columbia Club split the fourth net prize, with 71's. Earl Skinker and Don Knoesi had 80-9—71, and E. E. Krewson and O. P. Vogel, 82-11—71.

Frizzell Captures Bank Golf Honors

Paul Frizzell, Columbia Club golfer, won the annual championship of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Agency yesterday at Indian Spring, defeating Bob Peebles by a decisive 6 and 5 margin.

Corwin Fergus won the first flight over H. H. Road, 3 and 2; R. Zimmerman defeated Tom Semple to win the second, 3 and 2, while T. B. King defeated A. Drury for the fourth flight title. Third flight was postponed.

F. Barley won the first flight consolation, downing Tom Sweeney, 2 and 1; T. Hathaway defeated R. Hoffman in the second, 3 and 2; Dave Brandt won the fourth over Neil Singer, 6 and 5, and R. L. Whitacre was forced 21 holes to win the fourth over E. J. Bloomer.

J. J. Nolan, scoring 98 with a 35 handicap for a net 63, won the monthly tourney of the Rotary Club of Washington yesterday at Indian Spring. Bill Winslow was second with 89-22—67, while low gross went to Tom Beavers with an 80.

The winning foursome was composed of T. J. Groom, Howard T. Foley, J. J. Nolan and John E. Parker.

Babe Didrikson To Marry Wrestler

St. Louis, July 21.—Mildred (Babe) Didrickson, star woman athlete, former Olympic and one of the foremost professional golfers among the fair sex, announced between nines of a golf match here today that she would marry Wrestler George Zaharias.

BABE DIDRIKSON

Miss Didrikson, of Beaumont, Tex., and Zaharias, of Pueblo, Colo., who is better than average golfer, have not set the date, they said.

Their names have been linked romantically several times before.

Catcher Rudy York, of Detroit, is shown just as he dropped to the ground after he was injured when one of Monte Weaver's fast balls hit him on the back of the head. York was removed to a hospital where the extent of his injuries had not been determined. He was carried from the field on a stretcher.

Walsh, Navy rowing coach, who injured a bone of the lower part of the spine just before the Poughkeepsie Regatta, is in much improved condition and was moved this afternoon from the Naval Hospital here to his home, below Annapolis. His complete recovery is assured.

Winchester Fans To Honor McQuillan.

Winchester, Va., July 21.—Winchester baseball fans are planning to journey to Washington, tomorrow and Saturday to honor Glenn McQuillan who, for several years, was a mainstay of the Winchester Park baseball team.

McQuillan, now playing with the St. Louis Browns, will also receive the plaudits of a delegation from Brunswick, Md., where his mother now resides.

Manager Gabby Street has assured local fans McQuillan will be in the lineup both days. No promises were made regarding the Sunday tilt.

Admirers are planning to present McQuillan with a watch.

Carl Hubbell Gives 5 Hits As Giants Beat Cards, 5 to 2

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 21.—The old mealticket, King Carl Hubbell, came through for the New York Giants again today, tossing a five-hitter to whip the Cardinals 5 to 2.

The win left the Giants a game-and-a-half back of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who won their game from the Phillies.

Ducky Medwick's homer in the fourth and Johnny Mize's double in the ninth accounted for the only runs off Hubbell. Except for those two frames, only two Cards reached second base and none passed that bag as King Carl came through with his eleventh win of the year.

Leonard's Two-Bagger Wins in 9th

Knuckler Goes in Game in Last Inning and Halts Bengals.

By Shirley Povich.

An hour after the inert form of big Rudy York had been borne from the field on a stretcher, a second disaster befell the Detroit Tigers yesterday at Griffith Stadium. They lost their 3-to-0 lead and the ball game . . . The Nats tied the score in the eighth and won in the ninth, 4 to 3.

Felled by a head-high fast ball flung by Monte Weaver in the fourth inning, the 210-pound Detroit catcher crumpled at the plate and the whooping of the 5,000 customers was stilled as tragedy loomed. The ball that struck York bounded 50 feet into the Washington dugout after caroming from his skull.

Manager Mickey Cochrane, whose own playing days were ended last summer when he was similarly beaned in Yankee Stadium, was the first to reach the side of his catcher. The Washington Club physician ordered York removed immediately to Garfield Hospital after giving first aid.

York at no time lost consciousness, but in the Detroit dressing room it was revealed that the stitches of the ball had left an ugly 2-inch wound on the left side of his head, from which the blood flowed freely.

X-ray Today.

The extent of York's injury will be known today when X-ray pictures are developed. Dr. J. Lloyd Collins, Washington physician who was summoned to the hospital by Detroit club officials, expressed the belief that York had not suffered a skull fracture.

"But of course only the pictures will decide that," said Dr. Collins. "York will remain in the hospital for at least 24 hours and it is doubtful if he will be able to play within a week." Three stitches were taken in York's scalp wound, Dr. Collins added.

York, his head swathed in bandages, declared he was utterly unable to get out of the way of Weaver's pitch. "I knew it was inside and high," he said, "but it took a queer break. The best I could do was a half turn and take it on the back of the head. I know one thing: It hurt."

All of a sudden the Nats began to take a deep interest in the ball game which for seven innings was entirely dominated by the Tigers who amassed three runs against Monte Weaver while Southpaw Harry Eisenstat, former Brooklyn hurler, was handing Washington a string of zeros.

Pinch Hitter Taft Wright launched a three-run uprising that drove Eisenstat from the box in the eighth inning and tied the score, and then Dutch Leonard and George Case won the ball game for the Nats in the ninth.

Leonard Aids in Victory.

Leonard, who had taken over the pitching job for the Nats in the ninth after the need of a pinch hitter had forced Monte Weaver from the game, disposed of the Tigers in one-two-three order and then virtually won the ball game for Washington.

He slashed a two-bagger into left field with one out in the ninth and then, when George Case reached George Coffman for a single to center, big Leonard began a lumbering dash toward the plate. Rounding third, he paid no heed to Coach Clyde Milan's frantic signals for him to stop and waddled toward home.

It was a race between Centerfielder Chick Morgan's throw and Leonard's slowness afoot. He made it because Morgan's heave was none too capable, and assured the Nats the ball game by finally kicking the ball out of Catcher Tebbetts' mitt with the most ungraceful slide ever seen in Griffith Stadium.

Before the Nats hauled off and scored those jying three runs in the eighth, Eisenstat was their complete master. He had given up only five hits and walked only one batter.

Meanwhile, Monte Weaver was getting disgraceful support from the Nats. The only earned run he permitted in the eight innings was Charley Gehringer's home run blast far over the rightfield wall in the third that boosted Detroit's lead to 2 to 0.

Wright Starts Rally.

Before that, the Tigers had been the recipients of a gift run in the second when Sammy West muffed Christman's single on the pick-up permitting a runner to score all the way from first. And in the eighth inning, it was Buddy Myer's wild heave on Rogell's infield hit that led to Detroit's third run.

The customers scented the Nats' awakening in the eighth when Taft Wright, pinch hitting for Weaver, nobly delivered a single to center. Case coaxed a walk from Eisenstat and when Lewis singled to right to score Wright, Manager Mickey

See NATS, Page 19, Column 5.

Ahoy, Irish Airports! Look for Poffenberger!

The Detroit Tigers departed from Washington last night minus three ball games, one star catcher and one eccentric pitcher.

The ball games were left with the Nats by the Tigers during the three-game series here, the catcher—Ruddy York—was accounted for in Garfield Hospital, where he was nursing a head wound. But Manager Mickey Cochrane had no idea of the whereabouts of the pitcher.

He is Baron Poffenberger, the rookie with the comic-strip name and a penchant for disappearing acts. The last seen of Poffenberger was yesterday morning when he haughtily refused a prepaid ticket back to Detroit.

Cletus Elwood Poffenberger—or Poffy, as he is known informally—was being sent back to Detroit in disgrace. At least, Cochrane thought Poffy was being sent back to Detroit, but Poffy had other ideas. He quit the Tigers, but the suspicion is that he headed for his Williamsport (Md.) home.

That would occasion no surprise. Poffy has jumped the club before, without the formality of letting the Detroit management in on his plans. He disappeared last season.

Cochrane of late had been vastly displeased with the chunky right-hander. On Wednesday, against the Nats, Poffy taxed Cochrane's patience to the breaking point. As the Tigers' starting pitcher, he succeeded in getting nobody out and was yanked from the game by Cochrane after forcing in a Washington run.

But the development that stirred Cochrane to action was not Poffy's pitching, but his fielding. When the rookie stood stock still on the pitching mound while Hank Greenberg fielded Sammy West's grounder and made no put-out because the pitcher was not covering first base, Cochrane emitted a loud yelp of pain.

He took Poffy out of the box and ordered the club secretary to give him a ticket back to Detroit pending further disciplinary action. But ordering the club's secretary to give Poffy the ticket and forcing him to take the trip was not one and the same thing.

"I ain't a-going back to Detroit," said Poffy to the club secretary, and walked out, leaving the latter with a half yard of newly purchased ticket in his hands.

At latest reports, Cochrane was in a mood to notify all Irish airports to be on the watch for Poffenberger, who was reported to have been gazing pensively at an orange crate in an alley behind the Seventh Street Market.

N. B. A. Won't Recognize Scalzo-Dupre Fight

Outdoors
With Bill Ackerman.

We get all sorts of questions in this department—the one most frequently asked is, "Where can I get some good fishing?"

A simple question, if it involved no more than seems to be indicated on the surface, and easily answered, if the location of the fish was all that was necessary to make good fishing.

ACKERMAN.

But it isn't. For first we must know "How good a fisherman are you?" You wouldn't expect to see a bush-leaguer burn things up in the big time, neither can you hope to see just any fisherman consistently catch fish for, strange as it may seem, the gentle art of angling will bear considerable thinking, as well as a lot of practice, if you are to obtain "some good fishing."

There is a lot of water in our neighborhood—so much that the fish can afford to be choosy; and food so plentiful they can be temperamental as well. For that reason, if the question isn't amplified, our usual custom is to name several of the best grounds, such as the Gooses or the Middles, and hope that the questioner is one of those anglers that seem to be born lucky, or that the captain will drop them on a "hot spot."

In spite of the fact that many parties over the past week-end failed to make catches, we believe fishing in every section to be as good as we have ever known, and from one in particular, the Gooses, that drew several extremely loud "bellyaches," we actually know produced half a dozen catches that were larger than we care to see taken at any time.

Have you ever noticed, in a gathering of anglers anywhere, that one or two of them catch fish almost continuously, while the others bemoan their "poor luck." Don't be one of the latter the next time this happens, but keep your eye on those "lucky" ones. They have something on the hook besides bait—in simple words, they fool the fish, instead of letting the fish feed on their bait, are neither to fast or to slow in their timing, but set the hook at just the right instant.

If the question was asked slightly different, "Where can I get some good bass fishing?" The answer would be, anywhere in the Potomac above Great Falls, for smallmouths, but we would take it for granted the questioner this time was a bass fisherman and knew that in hot weather to fish the shallows and riffles in the early morning and late evening with lures, the deep holes in midday with minnows.

If it was for largemouths, we would say, after August 1, and tell just where to get a boat, Mattawoman, but would expect that he knew how to lay his lure close up to the water chestnuts, and that here too, early morning and late evening was the best time.

What we may better help those who don't know, be sure and tell us in your letters just what kind of a fisherman you are, for otherwise it is taken for granted you only want to know conditions and where they are biting best.

On Wednesday, an 11½-pound striper was taken off Patience by an angler casting from the beach—U. E. Blair, who probably knows the rockpile off Tall Timbers almost as well as Capt. Bill Goldsborough, and while fishing with him, fought and whipped another that was estimated to go 35. Don't let this last keep you awake at night for it is a specialized type of fishing, dependent upon many contributing factors, every one of which must be just right before it clicks. There are, however, many good catches of stripers weighing up to 8 and 9 pounds being made in the same section. The same continues to be true in the mouth of Eastern Bay, but the fish are not rising there every day at the same time.

A few small blues at several widely separated points in the upper bay—Norfolk spot almost everywhere, but they aren't to be taken with large hooks, or shrimp for bait—bloodworms continue to be the most acceptable bait. Good catches of hardheads have been made at many points this week, but the same can't be said of the small-mouth bass fishing up the river. First because the weather has been too warm, and again because there have been continual squalls over the entire Potomac watershed, with badly roiled water at almost every point.

Contest Was Short, Ring Body Insists

8 Rounds Not Enough for an Elimination N. B. A. Fight.

Scalzo and Dupre will have to fight all over again—and not because of a so-called "unpopular" decision rendered in last Monday night's fight at Griffith Stadium.

They will have to fight if they want to be recognized in the current N. B. A.-sanctioned featherweight elimination tourney being staged by Washington's lone promotional firm.

Because the fight was only an eight-round affair, Edward C. Foster, national executive secretary of the N. B. A., yesterday advised the District Boxing Commission by telephone that the fight will not be recognized as an elimination contest. Such contests must be at least ten rounds.

A rematch of Scalzo and Dupre for that and three other reasons was therefore suggested by the commission in a memorandum to the fistic firm last night.

The memorandum, signed by Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of District police and chairman of the commission, states that "The District of Columbia Boxing Commission is unanimously of the opinion that the best interests of boxing locally would be served by rematching Contestants Scalzo and Dupre.

"The opinion of the commission is predicated upon the following:

A. The heavy rain gave neither boxer a chance to show his true worth.
B. It was a split decision.
C. Three of the five local newspapers disagreed with the decision.
D. The bout was scheduled for insufficient distance to be recognized by the N. B. A. as a featherweight elimination contest.

"The commission does not 'order' such a bout to take place. The commission neither promotes bouts nor makes matches. It approves or disapproves of matches as they are made and as permission to stage them is requested."

The commission also showed that in a total of 2,365 local matches since 1934, newspapers have disagreed with only 15, a percentage of only .0005. The tables were made to show that "unpopular decisions" are not jeopardizing local boxing.

Scalzo and Dupre fought an eight-round feature bout in a downpour at the stadium before some 2,500 spectators. A recent decision of the commission forbidding cancellation or postponement of matches after 6 p. m. caused the firm of Turner & Ahearn to stage the match despite threatening weather.

According to reliable and expert opinion, Scalzo was ahead on points when the rain started. From then on Dupre was said to have forged ahead and to have won because of this late splurge.

A chorus of booing, said to be inspired by gambling elements because the favorite lost, met the decision, which in certain quarters was called outright a "steal."

Although The Post's reporter scored the fight 74-72 in favor of Scalzo, he stated that he thought the decision could have gone either way, in the opinion of the officials, in a fight so close.

Lee Breaks Bag In Gym Workout.

Paul Lee, from Tennessee, who meets Al Reid, New York, in the 8-round feature of the elimination tournament next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, turned on the heat yesterday in a tune-up 10-round workout at Huron gym.

After breaking the light punching bag for the second straight day with his terrific rights and lefts, Lee declared:

"I am going to knock out Reid just the same as I busted this bag. After Reid, I will demand a shot at Archibald, and I will flatten him, too."

Danning's Suspension Lifted by Giants.

St. Louis, July 21 (AP).—The indefinite suspension pinned on Harry Danning, first-string catcher of the New York Giants, was lifted today, and he will report to the club in time for the start of the series with the Cubs in Chicago tomorrow.

Danning, suffering from kidney ailment, has been out of the line-up since the Giants started their current Western swing.

'Congratulations, Gabby!'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Cubs Split With Dodgers; Win Opener, 5-2; Lose Second, 1-0

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 21.—Gabby Hartness's career as Cubs' manager got away to a .500 start today as the Cubs split a double-bill with the Brooklyn Dodgers, before a crowd of 25,830.

Clay Bryant tossed a four-hitter in the opener and the Cubs, sparked by a three-run rally in the fifth, clicked for a 5-2 decision. In the nightcap, Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin pitched no-hit ball for six frames, allowed only two safeties altogether, and the Brooklyns pulled out a 1-0 win on Dolph Camilli's homer.

Hartnett did his piloting from the bench in the nightcap, giving the catching duties to young Ken O'Dea. Charley Root, making his first start of the season, allowed the Dodgers only five hits, but he grooved one for Camilli in the second to lose the game. Hamlin fanned five and didn't walk a man.

U. S. Track Aces Victors

Wolcott Paces Yanks to Swedish Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, Sweden, July 21.—Fred Wolcott, Rice Institute's sensational hurdler, paced the touring United States track and field forces today as the invaders again took five of the seven events on the second day of the international meet.

Wolcott repeated his victory in the 110-meter high hurdles yesterday by skimming over the timbers in 13.9 today. The time was only two-tenths of a second away from the accepted world's record of 13.7 set by Forrest (Spec) Towns at Oslo in 1936.

Lidman, of Sweden, again placed second to the Rice star, this time in 14.4.

Ben Johnson, the Plymouth (Pa.) flyer, won the 200-meter dash today, after capturing the Century yesterday. His time was 20.9. Howie Borck, of Manhattan, the I. C. A. A. A. mile champion, won the 1,000-meter run in 2:31.

Gil Cruter, the Colorado high jumper, scored the only United States victory in the field events with a leap of 66 feet 6¾ inches. Pete Zagar, of Stanford, and the Olympic Club of San Francisco, was fifth in the discus throw with a heave of 151 feet 1 27-64 inches. The event was won by Hedvall, of Sweden, with a toss of 161 feet 10 9-16 inches.

Cochrane hurriedly called in left-handed Jake Wade.

Wade had a bit of success, but only a bit. He disposed of Sammy West on a short fly to White, but he walked Simmons and then he walked Myer to force in a run. With the bases still filled and one out, Wade was withdrawn and George Coffman given the job. Zeke Bonura got the tying run across the plate with a slow grounder down the third-base line on which Christman could make a play only at first base.

Then Leonard and Chase collaborated on the winning run in the ninth.

25,000 Hail Gabby Hartnett

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 21.—His tomato face flushed by the realization of a lifelong ambition, Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, baseball idol of millions, today donned mask and pads and directed the Cubse to a 5-to-2 victory as playing manager in the first game of a double-header with Brooklyn.

The 38-year-old catcher, who succeeded his 14-year-long pal, Charlie Grimm, received a roaring tribute from a crowd of 25,000 when he stepped behind the plate to receive the first of Clay Bryant's fiery pitches. Hartnett failed to get a hit, but he drew a pass in the fifth and scored on Galan's triple.

He did his managing from the bench in the second game and squirmed as the Dodgers won, 1 to 0.

Before leading the team on the field, the balloon-bodied Hartnett talked turkey to his players for 5 minutes in the clubhouse, promising to get tough with any member of the club who failed to hustle.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald,
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

George Case moved into a tie with Buddy Myer for the lead in the Man of the Month contest yesterday when he distinguished himself by his play against the Tigers. The points were awarded thusly:

To Case, three points, because he made two of the Nats' nine hits and broke up the ball game with his single that drove in the winning run in the ninth.

To Dutch Leonard, two points, because, after holding the Tigers scoreless as a relief pitcher in the ninth, he made the winning run possible with his last-inning two-bagger.

To Monte Weaver, two points, because before he was removed in the eighth for a pinch-hitter, he had allowed the Tigers only one earned run.

To Taft Wright, one point, because his single as a pinch-hitter started the tying rally in the eighth.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because he contributed an important single to the three-run eighth inning.

To Rick Ferrell, one point, because early in the game he was getting hits off Eisenstat when the rest of the Nats were not.

The Score.

Meridian Time Beats Strong Field in Feature Race at Hagerstown

3-Year-Old Filly Pays $18.80 Price

Dun Lucky Is Second in Feature; Early Broom Third.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Fair Grounds, Hagerstown, Md., July 21.—Mrs. A. A. Gray's Meridian Time has continued to be overlooked by the heavy bettors and has continued to win. Opposed by some of the best distance horses at the track, the 3-year-old filly rang up her third straight victory of the meeting and what's more she paid an $18.80 mutuel in the Williamsport Purse. With Jockey Kirk driving her, she finished a half length in advance of Dun Lucky, with Early Broom third, after a trip over the mile and a sixteenth course.

Good Wine flattered her backers by taking an early lead, but Meridian Time was soon in front and from that point to the end it was a futile chase for the other seven entries. Dun Lucky made a series of challenges but fell short of the mark. Early Broom lacked early speed and closed with a rush. Schley Nurse, the favorite, made a mild bid entering the stretch, but dropped back. The others were not prominent.

Meridian Time, trained by Charlie Beal, of Baltimore, stepped the route in 1:52 2-5 over a fast track and before 6,000 customers.

Schley Buck Takes Opener.

Schley Buck, a $4.40 favorite, was well ridden by Jockey Lou Machado to make good in the first race. Machado, whose suspension for the remainder of the meeting started after today's program, sent the Canter colt through on the rail to get to the front of Sou Feng and then lasted ahead of Pack Away. Boulder Dam was third in the field of eight.

Sun Belle scored a mild upset in the second race to produce a $14.40 mutuel under the handling of Jockey G. Miller, who rode his first mount here. The Sun Edwin filly led the short-shots, Disown and Aella to the wire.

There was plenty of speed in the ancient legs of Veritas and she bounced off with the chief money in the third race under the direction of Jockey Kirk. White Sweets and Soupcon followed the $13.30 winner home.

V. P. Noyes' Ruth Lerner found her racing legs and led from the start in the fourth race to pay $13.20. The filly ran Xmas Carol into defeat and held together long enough to down Nay Nay. Magic Line was third. Jockey W. Snyder rode the winner.

Hasty Star Wins At Rockingham

Salem, N. H., July 21 (AP).—Taking the lead from the start and never surrendering it, B. M. Smith's Hasty Star today scored a length and a half victory in the fourth and best race on an all-claiming card at Rockingham Park to pay $3.84.

R. W. Collins, Dona Montez was second, a length in front of Mrs. P. A. Shaw's Chancery Lane, and paid $4.62 to place, while Chancery Lane returned $2.76 to show.

Pin Money Wins Arlington Race

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—The favored Pin Money won the featured sixth race at Arlington Park today by a length and a half over Floragina. J. E. Miller's Unassisted was third.

Pin Money, owned by Frank Seremba, of Montreal, Canada, was timed at 1:11 4-5 for the three-quarter-mile sprint and paid $4.80. The E. C. Roth horse set the early pace, but weakened as Pin Money drove to the fore.

Lt. Robinson Also Winner In Net Meet

Young Parsons Defeated in West Virginia Open Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 21.—Young Deacon Parsons, of Huntington, W. Va., closed tennis champion, fell victim today to the court wizardry of George Judson, of Proenix, Ariz., in a rain-interrupted match Judson rallied to win, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

The 19-year-old Parsons played cagily in the first set of the West Virginia Open quarterfinals match, while Judson ran into trouble gauging his shots on the soft courts. Then rain forced suspension of the match for a time.

Lieut. Stanley K. Robinson flew in from Washington in the midst of a downpour to defeat Robert Shanklin, of Ashland, Ky., 6—4, 6—3, in a fast match. Shanklin threatened repeatedly at the net, but brainy maneuvering by Robinson kept the Ashland boy deep in the court, where the Army man outdrove him.

Barney Welsh, the defending champion, worked his way into the trifinals by defeating Fred West, tennis playing minister from Lynchburg, Va., 6—3, 6—1, in a match played in the rain. The Rockville (Md.) player had trouble on the slippery courts in the first set but came through on experience to win easily.

Edith Clarke, of Washington, the woman's titleholder, turned back Nancy Smith, of Frankfort, Ky., 6—0, 6—0, and Margaret Jessee, youthful star from Sacramento, Calif., defeated Mrs. John McCuskey, of Wheeling, by the same score.

Patty Dalzell, of Moundsville, eliminated Dorcas Duling, of Charleston, 6—2, 6—1, in a first round match of the women's singles.

In other second round matches Ann Miller, of Charleston, defeated Janet Duff, 6—0, 8—6, and Susanne Morton, of Louisville, Ky., trounced Georgia McCourt, of Webster Springs, 6—1, 6—0.

R. M. Brown, of Elkins, and Charles "Skib" Front, of Wheeling, playing a fast game, took over the Pugh team of William and Harry, of Charleston and New York, 6—4, 6—3. In another men's doubles match, Stanley Lewis and Joe Scheer, jr., of Cincinnati, defeated Marcus Opin, of New York, and Charles Brooks, of Charleston.

Bobby Locke Wins Irish Golfing Title

Portmarnock, Ireland, July 21 (AP). Bobby Locke, youthful South African professional, today won the Irish Open golf championship with a 72-hole score of 292.

Henry Cotton, former British Open champion, missed two putts on the last hole and finished second with 293. Locke also won a special purse of $1,000 offered by a Dublin sportsman to the player breaking 70 on any round. The new champion scored a 69 on the third 18 holes.

Cliff Olson Defeats League In Wrestling Show Feature

Crowd of 1,600 Sees Program, Including Battle Royal—Spectator Challenges Minnesotan.

Cliff Olson, who is regarded as something more than a villain in local wrestling circles, turned the full vent of his wrath on Jack League, the people's choice, and won with a body press in 17 minutes in the feature of the wrestling card last night at Turner's Arena.

The watch was a renewal of an old feud between Olson and League, for last week in the runway to the Griffith Stadium they tangled in an unscheduled fight, and so last night Promoter Joe Turner let them go at it in the ring before the cash customers.

Olson increased his unpopularity with the crowd before the match actually started, as he entered the ring with adhesive tape hidden in his trunks, tactics which the capacity throng of 1,600 did not like. League, however, had much the better of the actual wrestling and seemed destined to capture the match, only to have Olson clamp a leg scissors around his body and then convert this into a body press, which eventually won the match for Cliff.

A Battle Royal.

The special attraction of the evening, however, was the battle royal in which five wrestlers were herded into the ring, with the understanding that if a wrestler were thrown he would be eliminated from further competition. The first of these grapplers to be deposited was Joe Maynard, a last-minute substitute for Mike Brennan. Following Maynard went Sammy Meixner, and soon afterward, Felix Slovikouski, a 250-pounder, was given the heave-ho.

This left it up to Paul Bosch and Reb Russell to battle for the honor of winning Washington's first battle royal. After the alloted time of 30 minutes, neither wrestler had gained a fall, so Referee Cyclone Burns awarded the verdict to Bosch. This was a popular victory, as Bosch's clean tactics pleased the crowd.

Getz Is Beaten.

In the first match, Ed Meske, ladies' favorite, pinned Al Getz, a newcomer to local grappling, in 21 minutes, employing a series of flying mares as the medium of his triumph. The only other match of the evening, which lacked color in comparison to the rest of the card, was between Wally Dusek and Hank Barber, which resulted in a 30-minute draw.

Next week Olson will face Ernie Dusek in the feature match at Turner's Arena.

Local Pros Meet With Diffenbaugh

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood professional, has called a meeting of the District pros August 1, at Kenwood, in an effort to resume the popular Sunday afternoon exhibition matches, and map a fall tournament schedule to include the District Open, Pro-amateur championship and the Pro-Pro championship.

Diffenbaugh's action assures the local links fans of at least four of the Sunday matches, as otherwise the District pro's schedule was a skimpy one. After the several changes that upset the ranks here in the spring, the mentors had apparently disbanded any idea of a tournament card of their own.

Trade Executives' Tournament Won By William Daley

William Daley, scoring 103 minus a handicap of 23 for a net 70 won the silver trophy in the annual golf outing of the Washington Trade Association executives yesterday at Burning Tree. A field of 32 competed, with only 11 able to crack the 100 mark, over the championship layout.

Joe Baker, with a gross of 92, won the low gross award. Harold Young won the second low net among the members with 100—27, 73, while the gross prizes went to George Romney with an 85 and Edgar Markham, 93.

Emmet Dougherty, committee chairman, won the low putts prize in a draw with Bond Geddes, each had 31. Al O'Conner was the Blind Bogey victor, with a 92—15, 77 score, while the Duffer's prize for high gross went to Ray Smethurst, with 133, including 42 putts.

Honored guests at the dinner that followed the golf included Gov. Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Vincent Miles, special assistant attorney general and John L. Huntington, deputy administrator Federal Alcohol Administration.

D. C.-Philadelphia Junior Match Delayed

The scheduled Saturday tennis match between the Washington and Philadelphia Junior Davis Cup squads has been postponed until next Tuesday, Maj. Christenberry, chairman of the Junior Davis Cup committee, announced last night. Poor conditions of the Philadelphia courts due to recent heavy rains was given as the reason for the postponement.

Parker Quits Net Tourney At Brookside

Frankie Is Scheduled to Play at Seabright Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., July 21.—As a four-day rainstorm raged with renewed fury, the men's and women's fields in the Longwood Bowl Tennis Tournament slowly neared the rounds of 16 today under the roofs of three widely-scattered indoor courts.

Despite the weather—one of the worst that has harassed a tennis tournament—only two important defaults were reported. Frank Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., third seeded in the men's field, withdrew, as did Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, who was top-seeded in the women's revised draw.

Parker is due at Seabright, N. J., next Monday and appeared certain that the Longwood tourney would run into at least two days next week.

When the fourth day's play ended, seven of the eight remaining men seedings, the exception being the top-ranked Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., last year's winner, had qualified for the third round.

Only two of the three remaining women's seeded players survived. Hope Knowles, of Philadelphia, who moved up to No. 3 when Mrs. Andrus departed, bowed to Cissy Madden, of Boston, 3—6, 7—5, 6—0, in one of the most exciting matches.

Allison has remained idle since Monday, but the second-seeded Bobby Riggs, that amazing California youngster, gained a bracket on the Texas veteran by ousting John Foreman, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 6—4, 6—2. Fourth-seeded Hal Surface, of Kansas City, kept pace by eliminating Art Prochaska, of Hartford, Conn., 6—2, 6—0.

Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, ranked sixth in the draw, became one of the last 16 by defeating his University of Miami doubles partner, George Toley, of Los Angeles, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3. The seventh and eighth seeded players, Charles Kovacs and Bobby Harman, two more products of Oakland, Calif., also qualified for that select group.

Kovacs defeated Robert Kerhasha, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 6—0, 6—3, and Harman conquered Sanford Webster, a West Point cadet, without dropping a game.

The only seeded player to volunteer to play two matches was Sydney Wood, Berkeley Hills, Calif. Wood, seeded fifth, opened outdoors last Monday by dividing the first two sets of a first match with Al Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., Williams College court team captain. Today they started from scratch and Wood won, 6—4, 6—1. He then conquered Al Stitt, of Brookline, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1.

Capital Night Clubs

Mona Lee and Patricia Storm who dance enchantingly on the Shoreham Terrace.

There'll be a new, spacious and handsome cocktail lounge in the Roger Smith Powhatan Hotel in a few weeks. It will occupy what is now the south end of the lobby on the Pennsylvania avenue side. Painters, carpenters and decorators will be busier than any bees within the next few days. Opening of the cocktail lounge will not involve the the closing of the hotel's currently operating taproom. The two spots will supplement each other. Plans for music have not been completed, but probably will feature "strolling music," meaning a duo or trio of entertainers playing request numbers from table to table.

* * * *

A dozen or so of the loveliest contestants for the honor of being "Miss Washington" will be guests of honor on the Powhatan Roof tonight. In this group is undoubtedly the girl who will be "Miss Washington," perhaps "Miss America" after the Atlantic City finals.

Are you the sort of fellow who sensibly goes around without a coat in July? But then develop a yen to go to a nice, air cooled spot where no coat is de trop.

Oscar, of the Hi-Hat, has the answer. Go fearlessly into the Hi-Hat and Oscar will loan you a coat—a good-looking brown linen one—to wear while you are sipping your julep or Tom Collins. There's no charge or rental fee on the coat—it's just a new and free Hi-Hat service.

An innovation at the Rainbow Room is the advent of Milton Davis and Derwood Bowersox as an accordion-violin duo playing interludes between dance groups.

Already engaged for the New York World's Fair are Franklin Crawford and Joseph Caskey, now dancing at the Shoreham Terrace. They'll dance at the fair in a setting of "pulverized light" designed by Tony Sarg. "Pulverizing" the light will have the effect of obliterating Franklin's face and Joseph entirely. Sounds spooky. And we must tell you that Joe has, of all things, an airplane compass in his car. He says that when he's in a strange city, it's a help to know whether he's going north or south.

Found—A successor for "Flat Foot Flugie." It's "A-Tisket, A-Tasket," says Johnny Slaughter, who goes farther and prophesies that it will be as big as "The Music Goes Round." Ernestine Gardiner will sing it for the first time tonight at the Metronome Room.

* * * *

There'll be vibraphoning magnifique at the Show Boat tonight, providing De Vaughan Clements (Three Dees) gets his new, made-to-order vibraphone on schedule today, as promised. This super-vibraphone has supervolume, super-vibrance, can be played like a celeste when desired. Sounds immense.

They'll leave you breathless: Helen Forrest, radiant in pink, her black curls bobbing as she warbles, "I Let a Song Go Out of My Heart" at Madrillon.

Mayfair's Phyllis Cromling (a double for Dorothy Lamour) vocalling "The Moon Looked Down at Me and Laughed."

Blonde Evelyn Knight cuddling the mike and putting a lot of indigo into "So Little Time."

Dashing Judy Acton swinging out at Bamboo Gardens with "At Moments Like This, Who Cares?"

Jack Torry and his lads at Brinkley's going sugary, then spicy with "Blue Skies."

Those Filipino-type rumbas as done by the Four Filipinos at Griffith Farms Tavern.

* * * *

There's millinery madness in the Mayflower Lounge. At every cocktail session the lounge blossoms with the smartest and maddest hats ever. You'll see those teensy new doll-baby hats, tremendous cartwheels, Mexican sombrero effects—everything but the boresome conservatives. It's better than a style show.

"We like to take the best old tunes, such as those from 'Show Boat,' and make them new," says Herbie Holmes, current "big name" orchestra leader at Glen Echo. A sound idea.

Herbie is the first Deep South leader of Glen Echo's orchestra parade. He's good-looking in the finer manner and has a Southern accent broad as the Mississippi.

Lotus is out to please those many folks who can't see too much good tap dancing. Mayo and Carr are doing a "symphony in taps" besides their comedy specialty, "Coming Home From the Night Club."

Arthur Godfrey's "Pale Potomac Moon" is being used as a theme number by Larry Hendrick, console master at the Hay-Adams House.

Wheat Reacts After Advance Of 1c a Bushel

Early Rise Follows Reports of Damage to Canadian Crops.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 21.—Canadian crop damage reports led to a cent a bushel bulge in Chicago wheat prices today, but late reactions of securities tended to cancel gains.

Active buying of wheat futures here was attributed largely to export interests, but only a small amount of European takings of United States wheat for actual shipment overseas could be confirmed. Some No. 1 hard was purchased at 73¾ cents, 4½ over July price, the highest premium on the crop.

According to some reports from Canada, black stem rust infection and grasshopper damage is spreading with almost unbelievable rapidity in southeastern Saskatchewan.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅝ higher compared with yesterday's finish, September 69⅞@70⅛, December 71⅛@71¾, corn ¾ off to ¼ up, September 59⅛@59⅜, December 57⅞@58, oats unchanged to ¼ down, rye ½@⅝ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a climb of 7 cents.

Crop Outlook Lifts Cotton

New York, July 23 (AP)—Cotton advanced today as rains in the Central and Eastern belts created fears of increased insect activity. December, after selling up from 8.71 to 8.92, encountered realizing, and closed at 8.87, with final prices 14 to 15 points net higher. Prices showed net gains of $1 a bale around midday when reports revealed the extent of rainfall east of the Mississippi, where warm dry weather is wanted.

The market opened 2 points lower to 4 higher, only a partial response to steadier Liverpool cables. Traders at first were inclined to stress the beneficial effects of rains in west central Texas, where complaints of dryness were reported. However, less favorable weather elsewhere was regarded as an offset, especially in view of numerous boll weevils over many parts of the belt.

Brokers' Loans Drop $10,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $486,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $10,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,142,000,000.

Bank Clearings Approach Level Of a Year Ago

Total for 22 Cities Is Only 6.1 Per Cent Under 1937 Week.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 21.—Reflecting enlarged stock market dealings, bank clearings at New York during the past week almost equaled the volume for the corresponding 1937 week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Reduced amount at outside cities, however, held total for the country, as a whole, under that for the same week a year ago for the thirty-sixth consecutive time, with the single exception of the moderate gain reported for the June 8 week.

Clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended July 20 amounted to $5,368,845,000, as against $5,715,380,000 a year ago, a drop of 6.1 per cent. This contrasted with a loss of 14.1 per cent in the similar comparison for the week previous.

New York clearings went to $3,321,133,000, or only 1.0 per cent less than the $3,355,421,000 for the like 1937 week. Aggregate for cities outside of New York fell to $2,047,712,000 from $2,359,959,000 last year, a difference of 13.2 per cent.

Clearings for the latest period rose $372,186,000 from the total for the July 13 week. Between the two similar weeks of 1937 there was a decrease of $100,746,000.

Bank clearings at leading cities, with percentage changes from a year ago, compared with those of 1937, follow:

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Industrial Shares Meet Increased Resistance, So Closing Is Irregular.

New York, July 21.—Industrials met increasing resistance today and as a result the stock market backed slightly away from the new high for the year established on Wednesday. There was very little net change in the composite average and fluctuations of the speculative leaders were a bit narrower than on recent days. On the whole it was a day of irregularity with the volume of trading slackening.

The composite average at the close was virtually unchanged, carrying a plus sign for 0.04 point. Rails did relatively better than the balance of the list, while the utilities were leaders on the down side, the Street being disappointed that the announcement from the SEC Wednesday was not bullish news. The assumption, for no very good reason, was that Chairman Douglas, in his Wednesday afternoon press conference, would say something that would be helpful to the upward course of the power and light shares. The actual announcement, having to do with the application of the death clause to the utilities power and light setup, was later regarded by the Street as neither bullish nor bearish, which meant that some of Wednesday's utility buyers felt disappointed.

The opening today was irregularly lower in quiet trading. Volume remained low throughout the first hour, but stepped up after 11. Stocks turned strong and the ticker fell two minutes late just after noon. Rails moved to a new high for the recovery on this bulge, but it was noticeable that the leading industrials met marked resistance as they approached the highs established on Tuesday and Wednesday. Weakness ruled in the fourth hour and industrials on the average went below the minimums of Wednesday. Rails held relatively well on this sell-off, but with the higher-priced members about a half-point below their best of the morning.

Steel and Motors.

To illustrate the resistance that the industrials met today it is only necessary to examine the market in two leaders like United States Steel and General Motors. The high for the move in steel was 62⅜. It opened at 60⅞ and then rallied to its high of 62⅜, whereupon it promtply sold down to 60⅝, closing at 61. Motors has been at 42¾ this year and after opening today at 41¼ it rallied to 42½, only to sell off to 41¼ again, closing at 41½.

The same resistance is shown by the average of the industrial stocks, and for the entire market. The industrials, which reached an index figure of 140.77 on Tuesday and 140.74 on Wednesday, were held at the 140.62 mark today. The average for the entire market was at a high of 105.86 Wednesday and at best today was 105.84. Rails, on the other hand, bettered their former high mark.

Bullish forces are pleased that the activity of the market has dwindled as the above resistance has made itself felt. Tuesday's volume was 2,942,210 shares against 2,509,440 on Wednesday and 1,811,805 today.

Despite the irregularity, 130 issues reached new highs for 1938 today. The heaviest selling again appeared in the amusement group, in view of the Government's antitrust suit against the leading motion picture companies. Most active stock of the day was Paramount, which closed off ¾. Warner Brothers also was turned over in big volume and lost a quarter point. Universal Pictures preferred lost 2½; Lowe's 2⅜; Twentieth Century Fox, ¾, and the preferred, 2; R. K. O., ⅜, and Paramount second preferred, ¾.

Report of crop damage in Canada helped life wheat prices but there was a late reaction based partly on the irregularity in the security markets. The close in Chicago was unchanged to five-eighths cent higher. Fears of weevil damage, caused by heavy rains, helped lift cotton $1 a bale, the close being up 14 to 15 points.

Rails Lead Bond Market.

Speculative and semi-investment railroad bonds again proved the backbone of the listed market today, with the general trend still upward despite occasional exceptions. In the high grade group the feature was the initial trading in United States Steel 3⅛s, which traded at levels common in the counter market since issuance. The money market division was well maintained. Among foreign bonds, Japanese issues wavered badly, especially in those instances where the protection of sinking funds is absent or modest. Turnover in all issues was $10,090,000.

Intermediate and low-priced carrier bonds gave evidence of greater selectivity in buying, for some of the issues that were rushed upward of late suffered modest relapses. The main trend was distinctly upward, however, with the advances ranging from fractions to 5 points. Interest-payers that have not previously been marked too suddenly higher were the favorites. Alleghany Corporation Bonds did well, but utility holding issues were dull. Convertibles turned irregular, while local traction bonds climbed.

United States Steel debenture trading totaled 45 bonds, with the price ranging between 102¼ and 102¾, and the close between those figures. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were generally quiet and steady. United States Treasury issues improved slightly, in response to the higher closing late yesterday in the counter market. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporation also did well.

Japanese government loans were not much changed in the foreign section, but municipal and corporate issues of that country fell 1 to 5 points, with some new lows established. Italian bonds were dull, and Czech issues hardly appeared on the bond tape despite the general settlement reported imminent. Argentines recovered previous losses, and the high-grade issues of Canadian, Australian and Scandinavian origin were steady. In the European default group Polish bonds dipped sharply, while in the Latin-American group Uruguayans improved.

U.S.-Britain Trade Treaty Held Peace Aid

Broad Business Policy Would Minimize War Threat, Towson Says.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Speaking on "Economics of Peace," before the Junior Board of Commerce yesterday, at the Annapolis Hotel, Norman E. Towson, assistant treasurer of Washington Loan & Trust Co., informed that organization that the final test of the economic program of a country lies in the degree of well being of the people of the Nation wherein that program is in effect.

So it is, he believes, that history will judge the merit of our present foreign policy in the light of what it accomplishes, not only in behalf of the temporary ebb and flow of trade, but in what it has accomplished for the American people facing the other peoples of the world, in terms of all the relationships which serve to bind the nations together in a degree of economic unity.

Mr. Towson, who is in charge of the company's foreign department, reminded the meeting that there is now pending the trade agreement between this country and Great Britain which, if actually completed, may prove to mark a new epoch in post war international relations. This agreement it is said, will mark an attempt by the two greatest trading nations of the earth to rehabilitate the mercantile tradition, to substitute a policy of business and peace for a program involving the constant threat of war.

"It contemplates," he explained, "the employment of economic power in defense of those democratic traditions and institutions to which these two nations are dedicated. And if the measure of success of an economic system lies in the condition of the people living under that system, then there is ample justification for using economic power to its fullest extent to guarantee the continuance of desirable living conditions.

International Politics.

"On this promise, it is argued by many that the utilization of economic sanctions to gain or to enforce desiderata within the field of international politics is amply warranted. The eminent chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee has said that there is a growing sentiment in this country for the application of economic pressure to bring about peace in the Far East. To do so would mean that public opinion in the United States has judged the case on its merits, and is prepared to name the offender against whom two effective economic weapons are available.

"The embargo and the boycott," he emphasized, "can be applied with maximum stringency by this country. In the event that we act independently, it can be assumed that other sources of needed supplies and other markets would be found elsewhere in the world, thus nullifying the effectiveness of the punitive measures. On the other hand, there is at least a possibility that the application of such sanctions would be construed as an act of war, and would be met with retaliatory measures involving war."

Another method, Mr. Towson cited, would be to grant credits in substantial amounts to the victim of the aggressive offender in order that the sinews of war may be provided in adequate amounts to implement a genuine and effective defense. The Secretary of Commerce, he recalled, recently suggested the desirability of an international conference looking toward the proper distribution of essential raw materials in order that the peoples of the processing nations may be relieved of the haunting fear of unemployment and lower standards of living to result from any cutting off of the materials which their factories process, and to ensure to the primary producing countries some stability of world markets for the goods which they have to sell.

Admitting that here again we meet almost insuperable barricades erected by a chauvinism which seeks to be economically self-contained, he concluded. "It nevertheless remains true that, while economic sanctions can be effective in enforcing standards of international decency, the distribution of materials as widely as possible throughout the channels of trade constitutes the best means available if we are to avoid in the future those economic stresses which lead some peoples to challenge the possession of others and plunge the world into distress."

Bankers' Secretary 4 Years.

Serving his fourth year as secretary of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, Donald W. Larson, 28 years old, is said to be the youngest bankers' association secretary in the United States. Born in St. Cloud, Minn., he was educated in the public schools of that city and attended the University of Minnesota, later graduating from the Minneapolis Business College.

During his secretaryship of the local bankers' association, he has also done special work with the American Institute of Banking, and prior to his connection with the former group, was secretary to Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, for nearly three years. Previous to his service with Representative Knutson's office, he worked as chief clerk for two large manufacturing establishments.

Mr. Larson is a member of the States Secretaries Section of the American Bankers Association and attended the last meeting of the section held coincidentally with the convention of the national organization at Boston in 1937. He also is connected with the Credit Bureau of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and with Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking.

His work as secretary of the District Bankers Association was praised by Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, and latest past president of the former organization, in his closing message as its chief executive.

Donald W. Larson

Though only 28 years old he is serving his fourth year as secretary of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Gen. Foods Net $1.179 for Half

New York, July 21.—General Foods Corporation reports net earnings for the second quarter of 1938, after provision for dividend on preferred stock, of $2,817,851, or .557 cents a share on 5,251,440 common shares. This compares with $2,778,935, or .53 cents a share for the corresponding 1937 quarter when no preferred stock was outstanding.

Earnings for the first six months of 1938 were $8,193,578, or $1.179 a share on the common stock. This compares with $6,868,923, or $1.38 a share, for the first half of 1937.

The 1938 figures represent net earnings after provisions for taxes and dividends on the corporation's new $4.50 Cumulative preferred stock which was issued May 9, 1938.

Erie Railroad.

Cleveland, July 21 (AP).—Erie Railroad reported today a June deficit of $8,577 compared with $1,182,425 net operating a year ago. Erie also has annual fixed charges of about $14,500,000. These, however, are not reported in the deficit because the road went into reorganization early this year.

The six months' deficit, excluding fixed charges, was $279,205, compared with $8,324,251 net operating income the same period last year.

Nickel Plate.

The Nickel Plate Road reported a deficit of $272,236 for June, compared with a surplus of $238,143 in June, 1937. For the first six months, net income was a deficit of $1,934,421 as compared with a surplus of $1,378,242 for the first six months of 1937.

Excess Bank Reserves Decline $110,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation borrowing arrested the steady climb in idle bank funds during the last week.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that idle money in the banks declined in the week ended July 20 $110,000,000 to a total of $3,040,000,000. During this period the RFC borrowed $200,000,000 to repay debts to the Treasury and took approximately that much money out of circulation.

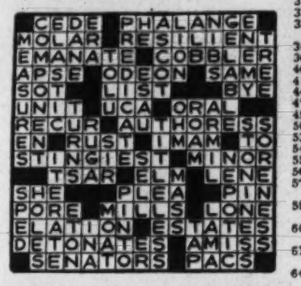
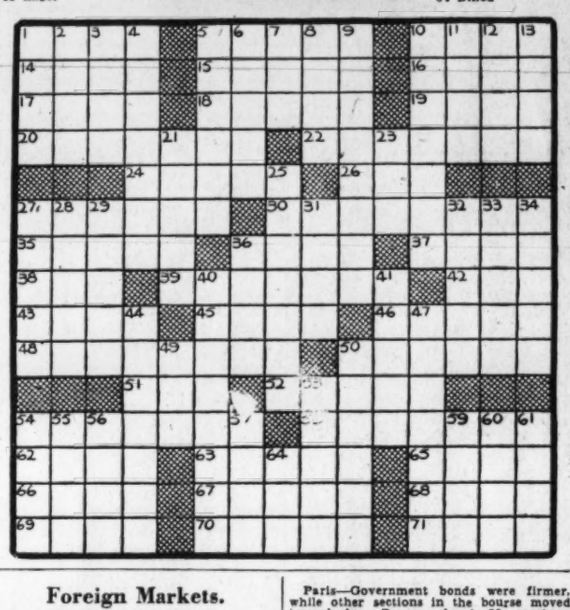
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.





Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 21.—Price movements in the stock market were irregular today and trading continued quiet. The tobacco, rubber, and mining groups sold lower, while aviation shares were firm. Although railroad traffic figures were disappointing, one dividend announcement helped steady this group. German and Austrian liens were heavy, reacting from 1 to 2 points, and the American securities closed with losses of fractions to more than two points. Gilt-edged shares finished slightly down.

Paris—Government bonds were firmer, while other sections in the bourse moved irregularly. Rentes closed 20 centimes down to 40 higher, and Bank of France issue lost about 50 francs. Suez Canal regained part of its two-day decline, moving up 155 francs. Industrials finished generally lower.

Liverpool—After selling lower in the early part of the session, wheat futures rallied on Indian buying of Australian wheat, and covering in the July option due to small stocks. Final prices were 1¾d up to ¾d lower. Cotton futures recovered from early irregularity and advanced on local, London and trade buying and closed 8 to 10 points net advance.

Bridge

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

My Uncle Sanky used to be sheriff down home in our county and believed in gittin' right down to the bottom of things and makin' crime hard to commit. One day a bad man came into town and got loaded up with that terrible liquor and he climbed up on the telephone pole in the middle of Main street and started takin' pot-shots at all the citizens. After he'd emptied his gun, he come down the pole and started to drink some more and he says "this time I'm gonna take two guns up on the pole and really do some shootin'." A committee of citizens ran to my uncle and says "What are we gonna do? And my uncle says "Well, in a case of that kind I think we'd better grease the pole."

Death Sentence Utility Offered New Program

Associated Investing Firm Submits Reorganizing Plan for U. P. & L.

A new reorganization plan for the Utilities Power & Light Corporation against which the Securities and Exchange Commission on Wednesday invoked the "death sentence" clause, was filed yesterday by Associated Investing Corporation subsidiary of Associated Gas & Electric. Associated Investing is a large holder of class B and common stock of U. P. & L.

On Tuesday, Atlas Corporation, largest holder of U. P. & L. funded debt, filed a reorganization plan supplanting a plan it proposed on October 26, 1937. Utilities Power & Light Corporation, Ltd., subsidiary of U. P. & L., now has before the commission a proposal to use part of $18,000,000 of cash to retire the parent company's debentures.

A hearing on the various proposals has been set for August 8.

Provisions of Plan.

The new plan was filed jointly by Associated Investing Corporation and Associated Utilities Corporation. In effect, it provides that the outstanding securities and claims shall receive the following treatment:

All claims ranking prior to the outstanding debentures will be paid in cash as and when due.

The principal amount of the outstanding debentures will remain unchanged, but accrued interest thereon to May 31, 1938, will be canceled, and beginning May 1, 1939, there will be set aside a sinking fund amounting to 25 per cent of the net earnings of the debtor for the retirement of debentures.

The amount of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock will remain unchanged, but the dividend rate will be reduced from 7 per cent to 5 per cent per year, and dividend arrearages to June 30, 1938, will be canceled.

Stock to Be Converted.

The presently outstanding class A stock will be converted into participating preference stock on the basis of one share of such stock for each five shares of class A stock held.

The presently outstanding class B stock will be converted into new common stock on the basis of one share of such new common stock for each ten shares of class B stock held.

The presently outstanding common stock will be converted into new common stock on the basis of one share of such new common stock for each ten shares of old common stock held.

Harlan Man Says He Swore Falsely Against Unionist

London, Ky., July 21 (AP).—Albert Hoskins, defense witness, today testified he and two others had given false testimony in the Harlan anti-labor conspiracy trial.

Government counsel declined comment concerning possible action against the three witnesses. The trial is before Federal Judge H. Church Ford.

Hoskins said the part of his previous testimony which was untrue related to the linking of Belton Youngblood, union organizer, with the ambush slaying of Bennett Musick, son of a union organizer.

Hoskins said when called by the Government in rebuttal that he received $25 the day he signed an affidavit about Youngblood in the office of a Harlan attorney and got another $25 following his testimony for the defense.

Guilty of Reckless Driving, Man Still Faces 3 Charges

Walter H. Hopkins, colored, 30, 929 P street northwest, indicted for grand larceny, assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill, was found guilty of reckless driving by Judge McMahon in Police Court yesterday.

Policeman T. W. Shomett said the man ran through a stop light at First and Indiana avenue, and later tried to knock the officer from his motorcycle.

Near First and L streets northwest, the officer said he pulled his gun, and Hopkins ran into a house nearby. Shomett said he fired two shots, striking Hopkins in the body and ankle.

Judge McMahon deferred sentence until tomorrow.

Roosevelt Appoints 6 To Rushmore Group

White House attaches said yesterday President Roosevelt had appointed six new members of the 12-member Mount Rushmore Memorial Commission.

The new members—Senator Norris (Independent) Nebraska); Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware; Representative Keller (Democrat), Illinois; Herman Oliphant, of the Treasury Department; Eugene McDonald, Chicago, and Russell Arundel, Washington.

The White House aides said Mr. Roosevelt had accepted resignations of four members of the commission. They were Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, of Illinois; John A. Boland, of South Dakota; E. B. Gurney, of South Dakota, and Charles N. Day, of South Dakota.

Cleveland Complains Gas Prices Too High

The power commission, acting on complaint of Cleveland, instituted its first formal proceeding yesterday under the new natural gas act.

It directed the Hope Natural Gas Co. to file an answer within 30 days to Cleveland's complaint the price it charges the East Ohio Gas Co. for natural gas for resale to the city was "excessive, unjust and unreasonable."

WPA Lays Out First Money in New Program

Paris, Ark., Gets $30,000 as Ickes Announces 'Dirt Actually Flying.'

The Public Works Administration, which has been working at top speed approving requests for loans and grants, yesterday announced the first expenditure of funds under the new program, and reported "dirt is actually flying on a number of projects."

A $30,000 advance on a $90,000 grant for waterworks improvements at Paris, Ark., was approved. The PWA called it the first "actual expenditure" of 1938 funds.

Approved PWA projects yesterday reached a total of 3,302, with a total construction value of $840,666,621, as 35 additional non-Federal projects in 18 States received the official O. K., and an accompanying $2,166,033 in PWA grants.

Public Works Administrator Ickes said a total of 1,658 contracts were forwarded to applicants following approval of allotments, and 512 have already been accepted and forwarded to Washington.

Ickes said that "complying with President Roosevelt's request for a fast PWA program, procedure has been streamlined, and the waiting period eliminated." Under the old system, weeks were consumed in signing of contracts.
